MARSHALL SAYS HE MAPPED HOP OVER JAP ISLES

Felt Hawaii Phone Call Hostile Act

BY PHILIP DODD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10—Altho he feared a telephoned war warning to Pearl Harbor would be considered by the Japanese to be an overt act, Gen. Marshall nevertheless authorized a flight over Japanese mandated islands by armed photographic planes in November, 1941, he told the congressional Pearl Harbor committee today.

The former chief of staff, who spent his fourth full day in the witness stand before the investigating committee, had testified Saturday he believed he had approved the use of commercial cables to warn Hawaii of impending Japanese action on Dec. 7, 1941, because he feared a telephone call would be tapped. The cabled warning arrived seven hours after the Japanese attack.

Today, however, Marshall testified he had authorized the army photographic mission over Truk and Jaluit islands because the navy was anxious to obtain information about the disposition of Japanese naval units. The project was suggested, he revealed, by Adm. Thomas C. Hart, then Asiatic fleet commander, now a senator from Connecticut.

Flight Never Made

The projected flight was never made, Marshall said, presumably because the planes which were to go on the mission "were involved in the attack on Hawaii."

"How could the use of the telephone be considered an overt act in comparison with this flight?" demanded Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.], only member of the committee to question Marshall today.

"It was a matter of judgment," said Marshall.

"Regarding the flight, there was no other way to obtain the information desired. We had to accept the responsibility they would call it an overt act.

Could Be "Hostile Act"

"As to the telephone message, the Japanese might have been able to ascertain what we were doing. First, it involved basing a warning on information obtained from 'magic' [decoding of Japanese messages] and second, alerting a garrison could be called a hostile act."

Marshall admitted flying armed planes over the territory of another nation was "indiscreet" and could be called an overt act.

The flight, however, was essential, he said, because the navy had lost track of certain units of the Japanese fleet. The planes, Flying Fortresses en route to the Philippines, were ordered to fly at high altitudes and not to circle or remain in the vicinity of areas to be photographed.

Admits War Was Near

Ferguson's cross-examination also elicited from Marshall the admission that war with Japan was imminent at least 11 days before Pearl Harbor because of aggressive naval movements southward by that empire.

Army intelligence, the general conceded when his attention was called to official reports by Ferguson, had learned on Nov. 25 and

Condition of Gen. Patton Held Critical

Col. Roy G. Spurling

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Dec. 10 (AP)—Gen. Patton was in a critical condition today, but his rugged physique has sustained him in resisting the initial shock of a broken neck vertebra and partial paralysis, army doctors said.

Today's final bulletin from the U. S. 130th Station hospital said:

"General condition maintained. Reacted well to initial shock. Dislocation of vertebrae is responding satisfactorily to extension. Condition remains critical."

It was the first time the word "critical" was used in describing the condition of the 15th army commander, who was injured yesterday when an army truck crashed into the sedan in which Patton was returning from a pheasant hunting trip. Previous bulletins said his condition was "serious."

Paralyzed Below Neck

Patton was described as being paralyzed completely below the fractured third cervical vertebra in the neck, and as suffering from a dislocation of the fourth cervical. The dislocation, however, had been almost completely reduced, a bulletin said.

The latest bulletin indicated that Patton still was conscious. Earlier the doctors had reported that the dashing former 3d army commander had spent a restful night during which he had slept five hours.

Call British Surgeon

Mrs. Patton, flying to his bedside, was expected to arrive in Paris at 6 a. m. [11 p. m. Chicago time], and will travel immediately by rail to Heidelberg. With her is Medical Corps Col. Roy Glenn Spurling of Louisville, Ky., a neuro-surgery specialist.

At Mrs. Patton's request, Brig. Hugh Carnes, neuro-surgical consultant to the British army, has come to Heidelberg and is in consultation with Lt. Col. Gilbert Phillips, commanding the surgical division treating head injuries at British military hospitals.

BALLOONS USED IN SINUSES TO COMBAT ASTHMA

Use of tiny rubber balloons, inflated inside the sinus cavities, to afford relief from asthmatic symptoms caused by infection, was described yesterday by Dr. J. M. Robison of Houston, Tex., at the 2d annual meeting of the American Academy of Allergy in the Palmer House.

The balloons, Dr. Robison explained, exert hydro-static pressure on the surrounding tissues to accomplish drainage by compression.

Patients, Dr. Robison said, are able to wear the balloons inside their maxillary [cheek] sinuses without discomfort for as long as three months. Good results, he said, have been secured in the last two years in 25 cases. The meeting, attended by 150 physicians from all parts of the country, concludes today.

17,984 Political Prisoners to Be Set Free by Greece

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 10 (AP)—Greek cabinet said tonight that all political prisoners, except those charged with murder, would be released. Interior Minister Constantine Rentis said 17,984 such prisoners were being held in Greek prisons. The amnesty decision does not affect the cases of offenses against ordinary law.

War Is—Well: Wine, Women and Lot of Fun

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 10 [Special]—There's nothing disagreeable about army life if it's handled the way Richard Bosse did. The former private first class, recently returned to his farm home near here after serving in Italy two years, explained today why he was in no hurry to get out of the army.

"That living in a villa by the sea was all right," Bosse, 24, told his four other brothers who also were in service. "It was one of the houses owned by my bride's mother, the baroness. We had a few servants—three maids, a cook, and a general handy man.

"Have a Drink"

"Here, have a drink of this 1821 wine I brought back while I tell you about it all."

Bosse came home in a taxi, which he hired to drive him the 260 miles from Jefferson barracks, where he was discharged. He wore a $320 pin striped suit which he explained was made for him by "Signor Nicola," personal tailor to Victor Emanuel, king of Italy. He had five $20 white silk shirts.

"I'm not kicking," Bosse grinned. "I had a pretty good deal."

His bride, the former Miss Elena Calasanti, 23, member of a family related to the House of Savoy, is still in Italy but will arrive here next month, Bosse said.

Bosse gave this account of his experiences:

He was a coördinating agent in an air corps outfit, work that took him from his base at Naples to Florence, Rome, and other Italian cities and sometimes to North Africa. He helped set up air depots and in the procuring of materials.

"Pretty swell job," he recalled.

Meets the Girl

He met Elena at a roulette table one night when his landlord took him to a party. She was a pretty, dark haired girl, a concert pianist, a graduate of the Conservatory of Music at Naples, the daughter of Baroness La Lomia.

For almost two years he courted her, visiting her about four nights a week under strict chaperonage. But the maid always on duty didn't hamper the courtship. "She didn't follow us from room to room," Bosse said. They were married Aug. 12.

"We just had a few of the wife's friends in for the wedding—about 300," Bosse related. "But we had a big reception. We lived in a 13 room house on the Mediterranean, one of the five houses the baroness owned. It was nice there, by the sea.

"Yes, sir, as far as I was concerned, the army was O. K. But maybe I was luckier than most."

NOW IT IS OFFICIAL: ATOM BOMB WILL BE TESTED ON WARSHIPS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 — The army and navy tonight announced officially in a joint statement that plans are being made for a test of the terrific might of the atomic bomb against naval vessels. The tests, long predicted, are expected to write the final chapter in the controversy of the airplane versus the battleship.

In the brief joint statement, War Secretary Patterson and Navy Secretary Forrestal said: "Planning is already under way for the operation, which will involve large problems of logistics, including the assembly of many naval vessels, extensive instrumentation for measuring results, and assembly of necessary personnel."

The reference to many vessels was construed to mean that a considerable number of ships will be involved in the testing and not that bombs will be loosed on many ships. A considerable armada may have to be assembled, it was said, to record all phases of the tests.

CABBIE ROBBED, SHOT IN HEAD BY BANDIT FARE

John Spiller, 54, of 2416 Burling st., a Yellow cab driver, was shot thru the left eye and robbed of $14 last night by a short, stocky gunman who engaged Spiller in front of the North Park apartment hotel, 1936 N. Clark st., to drive him to Elston av. and Augusta blvd.

Spiller said the gunman drew a revolver as he stepped from the cab and fired without warning. "Now give me your money," the gunman snapped, "you'll be all right."

Spiller was taken to North av. hospital. Dr. M. M. Taylor said the bullet, probably of .38 caliber, emerged thru Spiller's right cheek without hitting the brain.

Spiller was the second Yellow cab driver shot in two days. Harry Thomassen, 40, of 220 W. 31st st., an ex-convict, was fatally shot in the back and dumped out of his cab in front of 5522 Kimbark av. Sunday night. Thomassen, however, was not robbed.

Woman Fells Big Bobcat with Club After Treeing It

Durango, Colo., Dec. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Amy Donaldson got so excited when she saw a big bobcat raiding her turkey flock that she chased the cat up a tree. Holding to a branch with one hand, Mrs. Donaldson swung a cedar stick with the other to land a knockout blow on the snarling predator. The cat fell to the ground where Robbie, her dog, held him until Mrs. Donaldson could descend from the tree to make the kill.

To Dandy 1st Vets Own War Was Dandiest

BY THOMAS MORROW

Oral gunfire from three wars bounded off the walls last night as veterans of the "Dandy 1st" regiment got together and told each other about it at Northwest armory, 1551 N. Kedzie av.

Regiment veterans have been marching away from Chicago and coming back victorious since 1874. It was the "Dandy 1st" during the Spanish-American war, and the 131st, 33d division, during World War I. In World War II. the regiment was split between the Pacific and Europe.

Veterans of all three wars did their stuff at the reunion. The old timers drilled, and so did the members of Chipilly 131st Infantry post, American Legion. They were followed by a snappy presentation by company A, 1st infantry, Illinois Reserve militia, twice winners of The Chicago Tribune drill trophy.

Taps Sounded for Departed

There was a minute of silence for the dead of all wars and to honor the memory of the late Lt. Gen. Joseph R. Sanborn, commanding officer during World War I.

Then came the stories of battles that were battles.

Maj. Gen. John V. Clinnin, who joined the regiment in 1894 and was with it until 1917, when he was detached for other duties, spoke lightly of his long service. He said more of his comrades would have been present, but they had the misfortune to be scalped by Sioux.

B. Robert Johnson, 4037 N. Damen av., who rose from musician to 2d lieutenant, saw nothing wrong with the Spanish-American war.

"It was mules and wagons then," he pointed out. "When the infantry moved long distances it walked. There was heavy fire, the fevers, and mud."

Vet of Two World Wars Speaks

Col. James W. Hilton, who was with the 33d division during both World wars, spoke longingly of World War I. when he and his comrades were younger.

"We didn't have the weapons and equipment," he said. "And the Germans used gas."

Most World War II. veterans looked superior about the whole thing. Corp. Arthur Bogaerts, 6738 Glenwood av., regiment alumnus who wound up with the 2731st engineers in Europe, was open minded about other wars, but thought the one he was in was big league stuff.

State Auditor Arthur Lueder recalled he was in Company D — "Dirty D" it was called—during the Spanish-American war.

Then every one sang "Auld Lang Syne" and called it a night.

GRANTED RIGHT TO DISCHARGE, FINE VIOLATORS

Union May Reduce 30 Pct. Demand

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 10—(AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers union, in a move unprecedented in the motor car industry, offered the Ford Motor company a "company security" clause today that paved the way for contract negotiations on a 30 per cent wage increase demand.

Richard T. Leonard, director of the Ford department of the UAW-CIO, said the company agreed to talk wages at the next conference, scheduled for Wednesday.

He added that the union is not demanding "30 per cent or else."

May Waive Part of It

A percentage of the wage increase demand may be waived, he explained, if Ford makes annual wage, pension, retirement, and vacation proposals.

The company security plan offered by the union permits the discharge and fining of wildcat strikers.

The offer, a counter to the company's proposal of a $5 a day assessment against the union for each worker taking part in an unauthorized walkout, came as one of a series of rapid developments in the auto industry's labor crisis.

In addition to the proposal to Ford, on which the company delayed an answer pending study, there were these developments:

1. General Motors terminated its contract with the auto workers' union, whose 20 day old strike has made 213,000 workers idle. The contract was to have expired April 28, 1946.

Urges Early Settlement

2. Labor Secretary Schwellenbach urged an early settlement of the General Motors strike in the interest of America's "economic life."

3. A crowd estimated by police at from 6,000 to 8,000 persons picketed the skyscraper General Motors headquarters building. Union men said the crowd was made up of strikers at G. M. factories in Detroit.

4. First returns from locals voting on President Truman's request for a return to work by General Motors strikers indicated his appeal would be turned down.

In its offer to Ford, the UAW-CIO proposed that each violator be fined $3 a day for his first offense and $5 for his second.

Umpire Would Decide

An umpire mutually agreed upon between the parties would act as "judge" in the "company security" proposal to Ford. He would determine the guilt or innocence of the accused party.

The union asked Ford, in return, to promise there would be no lockouts and that management would not engage in "provocations leading to unauthorized strikes."

"Financial penalties"—the amounts were not stated—would be imposed on persons engaging in such provocation.

John S. Bugas, Ford director of industrial relations, said there would be no comment from the company until Ford officials had opportunity to study the proposal. He said, however, the company was "encouraged to see the union has given some consideration to the company's insistence upon company security."

No Immediate Effect

In informing the union of termination of their contract, General Motors said it was acting under a contract provision which gives the corporation "the option of canceling the agreement at any time between the 10th day after the strike occurs and the day of its settlement."

No immediate effect is expected to result from the cancellation, which means chiefly that new contracts must be negotiated before General Motors workers return to their jobs. Any settlement of the union's demands for a 30 per cent wage rate increase would make necessary a similar renegotiation of company-union agreements.

Reveals Story of Sergeant's Career as Spy

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—Atty. Gen. Clark today ordered the internment of Sgt. Frederick Emil Bauer, describing him as "a full fledged German spy who came to the United States on an espionage mission" for Hitler.

Clark announced that the justice department arrested Bauer at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind., today just as an officer board of the 5th service command issued him a discharge without honor. He will be held as an enemy alien pending a hearing on his repatriation to Germany. Bauer was granted a hearing in Superior court at Indianapolis tomorrow on a writ of habeas corpus.

[There are three kinds of discharges for army enlisted men: Honorable, dishonorable, and "without honor." The latter usually specifies that its recipient never should be permitted to reënlist, but does not disqualify him from most veterans' rights and benefits.]

Tells of Confession

Clark said "voluminous data, including Bauer's own confession," exposed the former German army lieutenant "as a full fledged German spy who came to the United States on an espionage mission for the fuehrer and was equipped with invisible inks and other paraphernalia for his work.

Clark added that "No overt acts are reported."

Clark gave this account of the Bauer case:

"The link between Bauer and German agents in neutral countries came from Bauer's own lips in a voluntary statement after the arrest of another German agent in Paris. That agent's statement gave American officials confirmation of Bauer's spy career.

Confronted with Charges

"It was after Bauer was confronted with the charges of his fellow spy that he made a detailed chronology of his association with the German spy system. It is this confession, together with a curious assortment of espionage equipment found in his possession, that forms the basis for his projected repatriation.

"German-born, Bauer became an American citizen [in 1935], then joined the German army in June, 1940, taking the customary oath of allegiance to the German fuehrer, and began his spy career in 1941. The government contends that Bauer automatically expatriated himself as a United States citizen when he swore allegiance to Hitler.

"The law grants him the protection of the statute of limitations, which has been regarded as preventing his court martial."

HOPE TO REPAIR WALCHEREN DIKE BY CHRISTMAS

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Dec. 10 (AP)—Engineers and workmen who have been laboring night and day to plug gaps in the dikes on the island of Walcheren hope to have the last of these holes sealed by Christmas.

The gap at Rammekens was almost sealed on Dec. 2 but a heavy storm opened it again. Of the island's 47,000 acres, 40,000 at one time were under water after R. A. F. bombardments.

The plugging of dikes has dried all but about 5,000 acres of that land. Farm experts estimate it will be six years before the orchards and farmlands again will be fertile.

EX-WAVE SLAIN, PLEA WRITTEN IN RED ON WALL

'Catch Me Before I Kill More'

Town Hall police were searching last night for the killer in the "handwriting on the wall" murder case.

The slayer twice shot and twice plunged a bread knife into the throat of his victim, an attractive ex-WAVE, and then left her nude body hanging over a bathtub in her sixth floor apartment. The scene was the Pine Crest hotel, 3941 Pine Grove av.

Before fleeing, the murderer, believed to be a short, stocky man, wrote a message with his victim's lipstick on a wall of her room. It read:

"For heaven's sake, catch me before I kill more. I cannot control myself."

In WAVES for Three Years

The woman he killed was Miss Frances Brown, 33, a clerk, formerly of Richmond, Ind., who was discharged from the WAVES on points last September after more than three years of service. She was described by friends as a woman beyond reproach, who lived quietly, and had many friends and no enemies.

Police search for her slayer was concentrated on a man, dark, stocky, and nervous, who was seen leaving the hotel around 4 a. m. His attire was described only as being "a dark overcoat and a dark hat."

"Whoever the killer was, he's a maniac, and we must get him," said Capt. Frank Reynolds of the Town Hall station.

Francis Purkiser, 36, of 836 Windsor av., a machinist, was arrested for questioning after patrons of a tavern at Grace st. and Broadway told Detective Peter Harlib that he talked as if he knew more about the murder than had been announced in newspapers. Police said Purkiser was released from the Bridewell two days ago. He served a six month sentence for burglary of a woman's apartment.

Find She Was Not Raped

Police theorized that the crime was sex-motivated, altho an autopsy showed that Miss Brown had not been raped. Another theory was that the slayer was a sneak thief. This was based on the fact that the victim's room was ransacked and her purse emptied.

The killer, in police opinion, entered Miss Brown's room, No. 611, from a fire escape after first failing to enter room No. 511, directly below. The tenants there, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Dole, recently from Mount Pleasant, Mich., were not home at the time.

Miss Brown's murder was discovered by Mrs. Martha Engles, a maid, about 8:30 a. m. She stepped inside after noting the door ajar and the radio playing at an hour when Miss Brown and her roommate, Miss Viola Butler, 38, a stenographer, usually were on their way to work. Miss Butler had been away over the week-end.

Finds Room in Disorder

The maid found the room in disorder and bloodstains everywhere. She saw the red handwriting on the wall, and then came upon Miss Brown's body in the bathroom. The maid screamed. Police were called.

Detectives found the victim's body bent over the edge of the bathtub, her head resting on the bottom and her feet on the floor outside the tub. A torn, bloodied shred of pajamas lay at her feet. Her head was swathed with towels. The bed was bloodstained and so was the floor.

Death Traced to Bullet

The knife wounds were believed to have caused death until Coroner's Physician Samuel Levinson performed an autopsy and discovered a bullet wound in the right side of the head and another in the right arm. While the knife wounds could and would have been fatal, it was the head bullet wound that caused death, he diagnosed.

A small cut in the web of the right hand between the thumb and index finger also was found. This indicated that Miss Brown had struggled with her assailant. The knife found in her throat belonged to the apartment, and it is one police theory that she grabbed the knife to resist him, was shot, disarmed, and then stabbed. Stains on the bed indicated a struggle there.

Police deduced that the killer then dragged his victim to the bathtub. There, it is apparent, they said, he tried to wash bloodstains from her body. It was later then, they theorized, that he ransacked the apartment, searching drawers, closets, and purses. That done, he wrote his message of warning on the wall. For this he used a lipstick taken from his victim's purse.

The message intrigued police. The writing in itself may be a clew to the killer, they said. The letters were three to six inches high, the highest sentence some six feet from the floor. The phrase "For heaven's sake" suggested a feminine hand to some detectives, who contended that the expression is more common among women than among men.

Capt. Reynolds' belief is that the slayer was prompted by sex desire and surprised Miss Brown in her room some time after midnight. She was in bed, he theorized, and the killer first pressed her face downward upon a pillow. This was suggested by a deep oval impression on the pillow as might be made by a pressed face.

Tells of Hearing Shots

The murder occurred at about 2:30 a. m., Capt. Reynolds said. This, he added, was established by a man, whose name he refused to divulge, who said he heard shots fired at about that hour. It was only an hour and a half later that the short, stocky, nervous man was seen leaving the hotel.

However, George Weinberg, 46, a second floor tenant in the hotel, told police he believed he heard the two shots. He placed the time at about 4 a. m.

The suspect was seen by John Dedrick, the hotel's assistant night manager. "He came down the automatic elevator at 4 a. m.," said Dedrick. "He was a stranger. He fumbled at the front door, not realizing at first it was locked. He turned toward me once as he left. He seemed very nervous." The man was described as 35 to 40 years old; 5 feet 6 or 7 inches tall, and weighing 140 pounds.

The man was not seen entering the building and it was obvious, detectives said, that he entered Miss Brown's room thru the fire escape.

Notice Door Ajar

First to notice something wrong, but not to discover the murder, were R. B. Blair and George C. Wyatt, tenants on the sixth floor of the hotel. There are 15 apartments on each floor. Both noticed Miss Brown's door ajar and the radio playing around 7:30 a. m. George Gilland, 1428 George st., a newsboy, dropped a newspaper at her apartment but did not notice anything unusual, he said.

Miss Brown had visited with friends, Miss Virginia Tracy, 26, a secretary, and Miss Virginia Fessler, 43, a physical education teacher, at 4200 Hazel st. Sunday night. Miss Brown left at 9 p. m. Her roommate, Miss Butler, had been visiting Miss Vivian Smith, 3616 Pine Grove av., over the week-end.

Miss Brown's mother, Mrs. F. O. Brown, a widow, lives in Richmond, Ind. The victim's father, a Pennsylvania railroad conductor, was killed in a train accident at Newcastle, Ind., in 1931. Miss Brown left Richmond in 1934, and obtained work as a clerk with the A. B. Dick company, returning there after her discharge from the navy. Her brother, John, and a brother-in-law, T. R. Adelsperger of Hamilton, O., will arrive in Chicago today.

The police crime laboratory, headed by Charles M. Wilson, was promptly called into the case by police. Its experts soon discovered several smudges on the window sills of Miss Brown's room and of the Dole room below, from which they hope to gather finger prints. The prompt call to the laboratory admittedly resulted from a recent series of articles in THE TRIBUNE revealing that police had often delayed use of the laboratory's scientific service, thus losing possible clews.

2-GUN FUGITIVE OF 13 HALTED IN TRY FOR ESCAPE

Shoots at Guard; Pal Also Quelled

A 13 year old, two-gun fugitive from the Chicago Parental school at 3600 Foster av., whipped out one of his guns and fired three shots in an automobile in which he was being taken to the Juvenile home yesterday. One of the bullets passed thru the trousers leg of Harry Burns, a truant officer at the school, who had picked up the youthful gunman, George Michaels, 1624 Fullerton av., and a companion, William Barry, 12, of 7221 S. Peoria st., in the drug store at Clybourn and Bosworth avs. on suspicion.

Burns ordered the youths to get in the front seat of his car and started for the Juvenile home.

At Ogden av. and Jackson blvd., Michaels drew a .32 caliber revolver and told Burns: "Pull over to the curb; I'm going to kill you."

Struggle Over Gun

Burns stopped the car with a jerk and seized the gun. In the resulting struggle, three shots were fired. One went thru the roof of the car, one thru the windshield, and one passed thru the leg of Burns' trousers, but did not wound him.

Burns took the gun from Michaels and found another gun in his zipper jacket. Chris Vallas, 38, owner of a filling station at 1714 Jackson blvd., and Edward Kirk, 30, an attendant, helped Burns guard the two boys until police arrived to escort them to the Juvenile home.

Robert Dosch, 12, of 1507 Fullerton av., who escaped from the school Saturday with Barry, was in County hospital with a bullet wound in the shoulder, inflicted Saturday night by a farmer on Dempster rd. in whose barn the two boys had sought refuge. Dosch was not involved in yesterday's shooting.

Runs Away Second Time

Michaels, who escaped from the school Oct. 29, subsequently was found in Wisconsin, and juvenile authorities provided money for his return. He got off the train en route, however, and a search was started for him.

The Parental school is a disciplinary institution maintained by the board of education on a 50 acre tract. It consists of a central school building and six cottages, all surrounded by a fence, housing 255 pupils.

School authorities said Michaels and Dosch both had escaped from the school three times. Barry has been committed to the school twice, first in October, 1944, and again last Sept. 26.

PREDICT CITY'S TAX RATE WILL JUMP TO $4.23

A forecast that the Chicago tax rate for 1945 will be $4.23 on $100 of assessed valuation was made yesterday by the Civic federation. Last year's rate was $3.97, and the increase is about 6 per cent. The federation bulletin, signed by James A. Cunningham, president, and Douglas Sutherland, executive secretary, estimated that the six major taxing bodies in the city would levy more than 209 million dollars, seven millions above the figure of a year ago.

BURGLARS GET $74 LOOT

Joseph Romanoff, 3827 W. 13th pl., told police yesterday that burglars stole key cases and wallets valued at $74, over the week-end from his leather goods store at 3925 North av.

WITNESS SAYS DOCTOR TOLD OF LOVE AFFAIR

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 10 (AP)—The prosecution was surprised today when one of its own witnesses testified, "Dr. Mansfeldt admitted to me he was having a love affair with Vada Martin," the nurse for whose murder Mrs. Annie Irene Mansfeldt is on trial.

The witness was Charles Kispert, San Mateo insurance broker, who said he had known Dr. John Mansfeldt since 1927 and his wife for the last 15 years as social friends.

Deputy Prosecutor Norman Elkington had put Kispert on the stand to show Dr. Mansfeldt's demeanor during the many years he had known him. Kispert said "he seemed perfectly normal."

Dr. Mansfeldt had told him he had made a property settlement with his wife because she "caught him with Mrs. Martin in front of French hospital" Sept. 28, Kispert testified.

Save Wife and Daughter from Man with 2 Knives

Deputies Michael Cone and Max Gorenstein of Bedford Park county highway police yesterday seized Eli Obradovich, 63, in his home at 1217 N. Hillside av., Berkeley, with a butcher knife in each hand. He was attempting to break into a bedroom to which his wife, Mary, 60, and their daughter, Sophie, 30, retreated after he threatened to slash them. Obradovich was charged with assault.

VET'S BROTHERS ACCUSE WIFE IN MURDER HEARING

Mrs. Lovina Warren, 22, comely dark haired mother who fatally shot her husband, Edward Warren, 27, a discharged service man, was held for the grand jury on a charge of murder recommended by a coroner's jury yesterday after Warren's mother charged her son "never had a fair break because Lovina never was a fair wife."

Two brothers of the victim, one an ex-marine and the other a member of the army air forces, took the stand to deny that Warren drank or beat his wife as the father of the young wife testified. Mrs. Warren, represented by Atty. Harold Levy, refused to testify when asked to do so by Edward Edelstein, deputy coroner in charge of the inquest.

Told Police of Shooting

After the shooting Sunday, Mrs. Warren told police her husband had been drinking since his discharge from the army. When he told her to get a divorce as she was dressing Sunday afternoon, she said she went to the dresser and picked up a .45 caliber automatic pistol. She fired it when he told her to "go ahead and shoot," she said.

John Reed, assistant state's attorney, said he will present the case to the grand jury this week.

Warren was shot Sunday in the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Belcher, 4155 Greenview av., where they had been residing since his return from overseas Oct. 9. Belcher testified, the shooting occurred after his wife, sitting in the living room of their home, hollered to him, in the bathroom: "Daddy, they're fighting over the gun."

Testifies Daughter Hysterical

"I ran to the bedroom and dived for the gun. They had scuffled to get possession of it and she got it first. She was quivering and hysterical and as I reached her, it went off," he declared.

Belcher charged his son-in-law had been abusive to his wife since his return from overseas, hitting her with a blackjack and a butt of a gun. He began drinking heavily about three weeks ago, he said.

Mrs. Marie Louise Ryan, mother of the victim, and her two sons, Edwin W. Ehlers, 22, a former marine with four years duty in the South Pacific, and Pvt. Herbert James Ehlers, 19, a member of the army air corps, contended Mrs. Warren had been unfaithful to her husband while he was in Europe for two years.

"He was gone two years and went thru five major battles. But he came right out of the army and went to work, supporting her while she was running around," Herbert said.

Mrs. Ryan said she will ask the custody of the Warren's child, Lovina, 2.

18 VETS IN BLOCK TOAST 19TH WHO WON'T BE HOME

Eighteen of the 19 war veterans of the block bounded by 39th pl., 40th st., California and Francisco avs., held a Christmas reunion party last night in the home of Charles Oakes, 2841 W. 39th pl.

Those who returned toasted the memory of the missing man of the block—Earl Kluge, an air force enlisted man, who died when his war plane was shot down in the China-Burma-India theater. His parents, Eugene and Myrtle Kluge, 2837 W. 39th st., were present.

The guests included John Reynolds, 2839 W. 39th pl., who earned the silver star for his gallantry in Europe—the highest decoration among the group. One of the 18 is a girl, Lucille Wiezian, of 2841 W. 39th pl., who was discharged from the marine corps a week ago.

COURT REFUSES TO LET WINKLER OUST 23 TENANTS

Municipal Judge Oscar S. Caplan yesterday restrained Jack Winkler, landlord of the apartment building at 938-44 N. Wells st., from evicting 23 tenants on the ground they were "trespassers."

Winkler contended the tenants had rented their flats from W. H. Rice, whom he had ousted as a sublessor in October for failure to pay rent. The office of price administration intervened by presenting testimony that three tenants had paid rent to Winkler.

In his eviction attempt, Winkler neglected to comply with OPA regulations, William Cohn, OPA attorney, told the court. Winkler appeared in court twice previously in an effort to evict tenants from buildings he owns.

COLD EXPECTED TO LAST A WEEK IN CHICAGO AREA

The cold wave that struck Chicago and the middle west Saturday night is expected to last for another week. Temperatures may not go above the freezing point, 32, for six or seven days, G. E. Dunn, forecaster, said yesterday. Dunn said, however, there may be a rise in temperature late tomorrow or Thursday in the Chicago area.

The chill blast in Chicago followed sub-zero temperatures thruout the Dakotas and Minnesota. The temperature dropped to 11 above in Chicago at 4:10 a. m. yesterday, then rose slowly to a high of 21 at noon.

Dr. Theodore Van Dellen, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, said, however, that the cold wind blew some good health into this area. He said general practitioners breathed a sigh of relief and reported that the cold snap, especially if it lasts as predicted, should bring a considerable drop in severe colds and mild influenza cases which had mounted considerably in the last week.

HURLEY BARES BRITISH DEALS ON LEND-LEASE

Tells How He Fought Their Profit Making

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10—Gen. Hurley charged today that his troubles with Undersecretary of State Acheson began when Hurley attempted to prevent a corporation owned by the British government from selling American lend-lease supplies in 18 countries and keeping the money.

The fiery general, still outshouting administration senators at another slam-bang session of the senate foreign relations committee, testified that Acheson stands for imperialism and monopoly against democracy and American ideals.

Suavity and Tweeds

Acheson, a former Wall street lawyer noted for his suavity and tan tweeds, struck back at Hurley. Acheson said that Hurley never had understood the lend-lease system in the middle east and branded as "utterly fantastic" the charge of favoring monopoly and imperialism against democracy.

Hearing fans who jammed the session to hear Hurley and Acheson slug it out witnessed one of the war time phenomena that are shattering tradition: Reporters' injecting themselves into public affairs. Theodore White, who identified himself as a reporter for Time, a Henry Luce publication, appeared voluntarily as a witness against Hurley.

The Real Story

Hurley's revelations about lend-lease cracked wide oper the story all Washington has been awaiting: The real complaint on which he accused Acheson last Thursday of "defeating" American policy in Iran and undermining it thruout the middle east. The stately silver haired Hurley resigned as special ambassador to China on Nov. 27 in a protest against state department interference in China that brought the hearings Hurley also was a special envoy in the middle east.

Insisting that he was carrying out policies on which he had received the late President Roosevelt's approval for the middle east, Hurley said, in response to questions by Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.]:

"The basis of Mr. Acheson's opposition was this: I contended that the United Kingdom Commercial corporation, a profit making organization owned by the British government, should not be allowed to handle and sell American lend-lease supplies in Iran and 17 other nations for the purpose of building up trade and excluding the United States from those territories.

Advice on Production

"Instead of creating imperialism and monopoly among weaker nations, I contended we should furnish them with expert advice on industry and production. The advisers should be paid by the governments they served, so that the burden of the cost would not be placed upon American taxpayers. This would be in contrast to monopoly institutions established for the purpose of making profit out of a nation by some one other than the owners of its resources.

"That plan Mr. Acheson discarded in favor of monopoly and imperialism. He is opposed to anything other than imperialism and monopoly. He is opposed to democracy and the American plan."

Claims Roosevelt Backing

Hurley said Mr. Roosevelt approved his ideas, adding:

"He also indicated the manner in which we would not have to pay for lend-lease and charge the American taxpayers, but would let the nations receiving the aid pay.

"When I was in Iran lend-lease was being distributed by the British corporation and the corporation was selling American lend-lease and keeping the money. I objected to that.

"Among the supplies were automobile tires. The British corporation was selling American automobile tires. I required the corporation to put the money in the bank to pay for them.

"And I am told the money was given back to the corporation later by Mr. Acheson."

Questioned by Connally

"Who told you?" demanded Chairman Connally [D., Tex.], an administration leader.

"I think Mr. Acheson himself," Hurley retorted. "The corporation finally made a compromise with Minister Dean James Landis [former dean of the Harvard law school], agreeing to pay 15 million dollars and put it in an account in London for payment for the lend-lease supplies it had sold."

"That's another Dean," snapped Connally, alluding to the fact that Acheson's first name is Dean.

"No, sir, I'm right on the ball," Hurley replied. "I said Dean Landis."

Acheson, who had been the first witness today, returned to the stand to face Hurley's accusations.

"The idea that I favor imperialism and monopoly against democracy," he said, "is utterly fantastic.

"The general did not understand lend-lease when he wrote his report [recommending American control to Mr. Roosevelt], and he has never understood lend-lease in Iran."

Acheson testified that military lend-lease in Iran is administered by the American army and that lend-lease for the Iranian government was administered by American government officials.

"There was a small portion of lend-lease in commercial channels, consumers' goods imported from America for the public. That was not a problem of the state department but of the Foreign Economic administration. [FEA always has been closely related to the state department and is now part of it.]

"To handle a comparatively small amount we would have needed a large force of Americans. So the British government-owned corporation was employed. It received the proceeds and turned them over to the United States.

"All the proceeds have been turned over to the United States."

Acheson said employment of the British firm was gradually cut down and that the whole operation has been discontinued.

An American Firm

"The United States Commercial corporation, managed by Philip Kidd, was in Iran at the same time, was it not?" inquired Sen. Austin [R., Vt.].

"Yes, there were three or four people there from that corporation," Acheson replied. "They supervised what the British corporation did."

Acheson earlier had ascribed his dispute with Hurley to a critical report the undersecretary, then assistant secretary, wrote of some of Hurley's Middle East policies and to a "stormy" meeting in Washington at which Hurley's attitude was "somewhat quixotic."

"We averted a trial by combat," Acheson said.

Hurley, now in his third day of roaring controversies with Democrats of the committee, gave a different version of the meeting.

"It may have been a stormy session to him," Hurley said. "It was mild as a zephyr to me."

The Time Reporter

White, the avowed Time reporter, said he came to tell his views and those of four other reporters with whom he worked in China. He wished to testify, he said, regarding George Atcheson Jr. and John S. Service, two state department career men whom Hurley accused of undermining American policy in China.

White got a chuckle from the crowd when he qualified himself as a witness in returned foreign correspondent terminology.

"I bivouacked with these newspaper men," White said earnestly. "When you bivouac with men you know what they're thinking. We would have known of a conspiracy."

Sen. Vandenberg smilingly informed White that no conspiracy has been charged. [Hurley says his men openly defied him.]

On His Qualifications

White then went on to tell his views of international affairs and the state department as seen from China, and Vandenberg told him gently, "I don't see how you're qualified."

"An official," the self-appointed witness said in reference to a report made by Atcheson behind Hurley's back, "must report a situation as he sees it."

"That's for the committee to decide," Vandenberg told him. "I respect your opinion, but I think your evidence is hearsay."

THAT BRITISH LOAN WOULD BE ANOTHER GIFT, SAYS SENATOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10—Sen. Langer [R., N. D.] today called on the senate to deny to Great Britain the $4,400,000,000 loan negotiated with the Truman administration "until Britain is willing to lay down her arms against the suppressed peoples of her colonies."

Langer termed the money not a loan but an outright gift, noting that no interest is to be paid until after five years. He said that "after that we will probably play 'Uncle Sucker' again and renounce the entire so-called loan."

Rep. Schwabe [R., Mo.] announced in a statement he will propose an amendment in the house to provide for financing of the British loan thru a separate bond issue to which subscribers would be limited to individual citizens. "If this is done," Schwabe said, "and if the administration can give satisfactory assurance that the people's own currency will remain sound, then I would favor the loan."

ARMY DELAYED ATOMIC BOMB, SAYS SCIENTIST

Dr. Leo Szilard

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—A scientist testified today, in effect, that the atomic bomb could have been available at the time of the Normandy invasion but for what he termed "unnecessary" security precautions imposed by the army.

Dr. Leo Szilard, University of Chicago physicist, told the senate atomic committee which is considering means of controling atomic energy that secrecy safeguards which he considered unwarranted had delayed the advent of the bomb at least 18 months. He said it could have been produced "about the spring of 1944, according to my best guess." In that spring, allied troops in Italy were trying to crack the fortress of Casino. The landings in France started on June 6.

Sen. Johnson [D., Colo.] observed that Germans would have been "astonished if an atomic bomb had been dropped on Berlin in the spring of 1944."

CLINNIN'S NAME OFFERED G.O.P. ON SHERIFF SLATE

John V. Clinnin, attorney, civic leader, and retired major general, appeared yesterday as a potential candidate for sheriff before the Republican committee on 1946 county candidates at the party's La Salle hotel headquarters. He was presented by Paul C. Ross, 42d ward committeeman.

Telfer McArthur, publisher of weekly newspapers in Oak Park and other suburbs, was proposed as candidate for congressman at large by Republican leaders from the 6th district.

The committee, headed by Chairman George M. Fisher, heard proposals that Atty. Edward Chayes of the 49th ward, a lieutenant in World War I. and a colonel in World War II., be a candidate for judge of the Probate court.

KOREAN CHARGES U. S. AID URGED RED AS PARTNER

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 10—Dr. Syngman Rhee, former president of the provisional government of Korea, and chairman of the Korean commission in Washington, D. C., revealed today he was instructed in February, 1942, by Dr. Stanley Hornbeck of the state department to "collaborate with a Korean whose known record embraces employment as a Japense agent and notorious communist agitator."

Dr. Rhee identified the Korean as Kil Soo Haan who is now in Washington.

Agrees with Langer

Commenting on the charges of Sen. Langer [R., N. D.] that "Korean independence is being overshadowed by Russian objections," Dr. Rhee agreed that the "soviets reserve freedom of action for the right time to strike."

Dr. Rhee attributed the present difficulties in Korea to what Sen. Langer called "state department eagerness to appease the communists and willingness to desert democracy everywhere beyond its borders." Korea is under divided rule of Americans and Russians.

'Rush Toward New War.'

"While being unable to deal with the growing communist problem in Korea," Dr. Rhee said, "we must stand and watch the growing menace to our country and to the world. Herein lie the seeds of the third world war toward which we all surely are rushing. The American people must be given a chance to know the facts before it is too late."

G. O. P. OF STATE BEGINS WORK ON 1946 PLATFORM

The committee which will do advance work in drafting the 1946 Republican state platform will be headed by Frank G. Thompson of Mount Vernon, state director of registration and education, it was announced yesterday by State Chairman John F. Tyrrell.

Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke, Republican member of the board of election commissioners, was named vice chairman. Speaker Hugh Green of Jacksonville will be secretary and Mrs. June Hunt, president of the Federation of Illinois Women's Republican clubs, vice secretary.

Tyrrell said the pre-convention platform committee would hold a series of meetings thruout the state to determine voters' sentiments.

BULLETS FLY AT ARGENTINE FUNERAL RITES

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Dec. 10 (AP)—Four persons were wounded today in a gun fight after a funeral procession, bearing the bodies of three persons killed during a political demonstration Saturday night, arrived at the cemetery.

The shooting began in the street outside during burial ceremonies at the graves and increased in intensity.

At least 33 persons were wounded during Saturday's political demonstration against former Vice President Juan Peron—who is campaigning for president. A series of gun battles broke out when a crowd of about 200,000 persons was fired upon by unidentified assailants.

WATCH AND PIN STOLEN

Ely Chernoff, 3205 Division st., yesterday reported the theft of a watch and a gold pin, both valued at $30, in a burglary of his home Sunday night.

6 MILLION CRIME ARMY ON MARCH, FBI CHIEF WARNS

War Time Juveniles Big Threat, He Says

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 10 [Special]—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, today warned that wartime juveniles are spearheading an army of six million law breakers in a new crime wave that may be as bad as the gangster era of the roaring '20s.

Kidnaping, hijacking and other types of violent crime are increasing alarmingly thruout the nation, Hoover said in an interview and a radio address before the 52d annual meeting of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

The FBI chief said he resented the libel of blaming returning veterans for the postwar wave of lawlessness, and declared that the most despicable offenses are being committed by juvenile delinquents.

Increase 198 Per Cent

He said arrests of girls under 18 have increased 198 per cent since 1939. In that same period, arrests of boys under 18 have increased 48 per cent for homicide, 70 per cent for rape, 39 per cent for robbery, 72 per cent for assault, 55 per cent for auto thefts, and 101 per cent for drunkenness and driving while intoxicated.

Laxity of parents is a major factor in contributing to the rising tide of crime, Hoover said.

"Misapprehension regarding servicemen," he said, "stems from the fact that many weapons used in crimes of violence are either service pistols, are souvenir weapons the returning soldiers were allowed to bring home because of lax regulations. Many of these inevitably find their way into the hands of unscrupulous black marketeers who resell them to hoodlums and criminals."

"Guilty of Understatement"

Hoover cited statistics which indicated, he said, that the press is "guilty of understatement" in writing crime stories.

"Finger print files of the FBI," he said, "reveal a criminal army of six million individuals who have been arrested and finger printed—one out of every 23 inhabitants in the United States."

The nation-wide crime increase for October of this year over the same month of last year, Hoover said, is 12.3 per cent in the western states, 9.7 per cent in the northern states, 6 per cent in the northeast, and 3 per cent in the south.

"After every great war or period of acute national emergency there has been a recession of moral fortitude," Hoover declared. "This one will be no exception."

LEGIONNAIRES SEE ARMY LET 10 OUT OF SERVICE

Ten army air force men from Scott field, Ill., were guests of the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion at a luncheon yesterday in the Hotel Sherman. Two hours after the start of the luncheon, the men had their discharges and were out of service.

The separation ceremony was presented by Col. Neal Creighton, commanding officer at Scott field, and Capt. Hugo List, chaplain, to give the Legionnaires a comparison of present day procedure and the procedure when they were discharged after World War I.

Among the air force men discharged was Staff Sgt. Frank Waterman, 24, whose wife, Martha, lives at 628 Wellington av., Elgin. Waterman was inducted Jan. 19, 1942, in Chicago, and was a cook in the air forces.

Feared Phoning Hawaii, However, as 'Hostile'

26, 1941, that five Jap divisions in 30 to 40 transports had left Shanghai, bound south. This information clearly indicated, Marshall said, Japan was moving to cross the line which in his opinion would have pulled us into war, regardless of Pearl Harbor, in order to protect the Philippines.

Quizzed on Hull Terms

Ferguson questioned Marshall closely on events surrounding the dispatch of warnings to Gen. Short, commanding the Hawaiian garrison, and other Pacific commanders on Nov. 27, 1941, the day after State Secretary Hull delivered his final terms to the Japanese "peace" envoys in Washington.

The senator pointed out that the army warning stated the negotiations "appear about to be terminated," but the warning sent by the navy to its commanders said flatly "negotiations have ceased." The army ordered "appropriate" reconnaissance measures but the navy ordered a specific war plan to be put in effect.

"What are the reasons for these differences?" Ferguson asked.

"I cannot say definitely, but probably the different views of the individuals drafting the messages were reflected," Marshall said.

Marshall conceded that the navy message was "stronger" in its wording. Questioning by Ferguson brought out the fact that the army message was changed on orders of War Secretary Stimson prior to its dispatch, altho Marshall said he did not know what the changes were.

[The report of the army board of inquiry on the Pearl Harbor disaster said the message originally stated "negotiations with Japan have been terminated,' but that Stimson had softened this and other phrases.]

Not in Washington

Marshall, he explained, was not in Washington Nov. 27, 1941, having left for army maneuvers in the south on the 26th. Lt. Gen. L. T. Gerow, chief of the war plans division, was acting in his place in the dispatch of messages to overseas commanders.

Marshall was questioned about a joint memorandum to the President Nov. 17, 1941, signed by Marshall and Adm. Stark, chief of naval operations, in which Mr. Roosevelt was told that if negotiations failed the Japanese "may attack the Burma road, Thailand, Malaya, the Netherlands East Indies, the Philippines, the Russian maritime provinces."

"Why was Hawaii not mentioned?" Ferguson asked. Marshall reiterated statements made in his earlier testimony that a Japanese move to the south—Thailand and Malaya—was indicated in all reports received and that no "general" attack was feared at Hawaii.

"We had made commitments of troops and material to Hawaii and thought we had prepared that garrison so that its defensive strength would deter the Japanese from moving there," Marshall said.

MORNING SESSION

BY LAURENCE BURD

The United States was asked by the British in November, 1941, to move a part of its Pacific fleet from Hawaii to Singapore, but the request was refused, Gen. Marshall told the morning session of the inquiry.

Marshall told the committee the "British wanted us to base a number of vessels at Singapore," Britain's western Pacific bastion, but that "we opposed it."

"The British didn't have much at Singapore," Marshall explained. "They felt that if we would base part of our navy there it would greatly strengthen Britain's position in the Pacific, without reducing her naval forces in the Atlantic war against Germany."

Too Far from Supplies

The general said he and Adm. Stark, then chief of naval operations, felt American vessels, if moved to Singapore, would be too far removed from supply sources and would be vulnerable to air attack from the Japs in the event of war.

Marshall told of the British request during questioning by Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] as to American defense preparations in the Pacific during the growing tension with Japan in the months preceding the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor.

Marshall said he and Adm. Stark were concerned primarily with "gaining time" to prepare our defense, particularly in the Philippine Islands, because at that time [November, 1941] our forces in the far Pacific were inadequate to meet a Jap war thrust.

Opposed Ultimatum

It was on this basis, Marshall continued, that he and Stark in a joint memorandum to the late President Roosevelt on Nov. 5 urged that "no ultimatum be delivered to Japan."

"Were we in a position at that time to back up any additional warnings to Japan with military force?" Ferguson asked.

"We were not," replied Marshall.

Records already made public show that three weeks later [Nov. 27] State Secretary Hull served notice on Japan that the United States would not make any concessions to Japan's position.

Altho Marshall did not comment directly on the Hull note, he said that Hull, as head of the state department, was concerned with "questions of policy for which the United States stood as well as military considerations." On the other hand, he said, his own concern and that of Stark was strictly military.

Ferguson questioned Marshall at length about the Nov. 5 memorandum to the President, which suggested that "military action" against Japan be taken if Jap forces moved into western Thailand or advanced southward thru the Gulf of Siam. The witness said he felt such moves would endanger the Philippine Islands and British possessions, including the Kra and Malay peninsulas.

Felt It Meant War

"Did you feel," asked Ferguson, "that a Japanese move against British territory would inevitably involve the United States in war?"

"Yes," said Marshall, who explained that joint British-American resistance to a Jap thrust in the Pacific was the basis agreed upon in staff conversations by the two governments' military leaders at Singapore in the spring of 1941.

Ferguson then cited from the committee record a Dec. 6, 1941, cablegram from Ambassador Winant in London to Washington, saying the British had sighted Jap naval ships steaming toward the Kra peninsula. The cablegram was received in Washington by the state department at 10:40 a. m. Dec. 6, 29 hours before the Japs struck Hawaii.

"According to your memorandum to the President a Jap advance into Kra called for military action by us. So Winant's message meant war with Japan, didn't it?" Ferguson asked.

"It meant an attack by Japan in a military sense," Marshall replied, "but the question of going to war was up to the two governments [United States and Britain]."

U. S. WASN'T 'TOO FAR' DURING WAR, UNO IS REMINDED

BY WILLIAM FULTON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 10—What kind of public opinion the united nations would live in if it established its capital in the United States touched off lively debate today in the meeting of the preparatory commission here. The commission is attempting to pick a site for recommendation to the first meeting of the general assembly in January.

South Africa's delegate, G. Heaton Nicholls charged that if headquarters is set up in the United States it would be subject to constantly livided press and public opinion.

Cites A-Bomb Problem

"Even now there is a tremendous controversy in the United States over the atomic bomb," Nicholls told the delegates of 51 nations. "The United States is like a man going about with a bomb who wants to drop it and get rid of it. If the United States had the capital of the united nations, it would want to shift it elsewhere, so that it could resume a life of domestic peace."

Carlos Salamanca, Bolivia's delegate, scoffed at the idea that the United States was too far away for diplomats in Europe. "The great American power was conscious of its duties during the war and never thought Europe was too far," he reminded the delegates.

China's Dr. Victor Chi-Tsai Hoo rose to say in a croaking voice that he hoped the seat would be in a better climate than London, wrapped in heavy fog and cold.

"Some speakers have argued that the seat of world organization should be in Europe in order that the clinic might be near the sick," said Hoo. "But the same argument would apply to the far east.

Jugoslav Delighted

"Are the united nations so weak or sure to be wrong that they are afraid of adverse public opinion? It should be the united nations that exerts its influence on public opinion."

Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic of Yugoslavia said his country would be delighted to see the united nations make its home in the country of Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

At this, Lt. Gov. Richard T. James of Indiana turned to the press row. "I guess he never heard of Abraham Lincoln," said James.

U.S. AID CALLED FOE OF CHICAGO AS UNO CAPITAL

The 45th ward Democratic organization last night adopted a resolution calling for the removal of Adlai Stevenson as the United States' acting representative to the united nations' organization. Stevenson was accused of trying to sabotage efforts to bring the world capital to Chicago, altho he was born in Bloomington and once had a law office here. The vote was unanimous, said Committeeman Charles H. Weber, a state representative.

The resolution pointed out that Mayor Kelly and a special committee had made trips to London in an effort to get the allied organization to locate in Chicago, but that Stevenson had later said that the United States wasn't interested in getting the world capital.

Raymond Regan, a naval veteran, presented the resolution of censure. Copies were sent to Mayor Kelly and Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.].

HOUSE INVITES WORLD LEAGUE TO LOCATE IN U. S.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 [Special]—The house of representatives today formally invited the allied nations to locate the seat of the world security organization in this country. A resolution offered by Rep. Case [R., S. D.] was adopted by a voice vote. Senate action also is required on the measure. Adlai Stevenson, American representative on the preparatory commission, told his colleagues in London on Friday that the United States is not seeking the headquarters.

NAZIS DRENCHED IN 1,400 DEGREE BOMBER HEAT

422,000 Residents of Cities Killed

Washington, D.C., Dec. 10 [Special] — Approximately 422,000 German city dwellers were killed in allied air raids during the war and 77,750 are missing, a report by the medical branch of the United States strategic bombing survey said today. Fire was the greatest killer, the report said.

Medical experts attached to the bombing survey, which was a civilian-military group appointed to analyze results of the air war against the axis, followed invasion forces into Germany for investigations and to interview the enemy population. The findings were made public by Maj. Cortez Enloe Jr., of Manhasset, N.Y., who worked on the survey and edited the report.

"Fire blizzards" set by incendiary bombs caused deaths described as akin to those from the atomic bombs in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, and for the same reason—intense heat.

Air 1,400 Degrees Hot

The victims died after inhaling air heated to as high as 1,400 degrees, of carbon monoxide poisoning, of direct injury from bombs, and of infection resulting from burns, the report said.

The fire raid on Hamburg in July, 1943, was cited as a typical example. Fires kindled by incendiary bombs burned uncontroled for six weeks. Temperatures went to 1,472 degrees and the flames created drafts of 90 miles an hour which sucked people down streets and into the inferno.

People ran from shelters into streets "and were see nto collapse slowly like persons utterly exhausted," their lungs seared and their bodies suddenly dehydrated by the intense heat, the survey said.

Bodies Resemble Mummies

"Most of them were not burned to ashes but [their bodies] were dry and shrunken, resembling mummies," the report said.

Carbon monoxide poisoning caused deaths in shelters and in cellars, the survey reported. The carbon monoxide was generated by incomplete combustion from flames outside of by bomb bursts, the gases from which contained as high as 70 per cent carbon monoxide.

People in shelters "died gently," the report said. They were found sitting neatly at rest, untouched by bomb or blaze—just dead.

"Many large hospitals have been obliterated, and their patients with them," the report said.

Every building of the Krupp hospital in Essen, one of the most modern in Europe, was leveled in a single raid, the survey said.

The report said there were no epidemics in Germany during the war, and the American doctors aren't quite sure why. German doctors said it was a matter of luck.

The survey experts thought that the devotion which Germans give to personal hygiene and their penchant for keeping their homes spotlessly clean might have been factors.

PALMER HOUSE SOLD TO HILTON FOR 19 MILLIONS

Chain Headquarters Will Be Moved to Chicago

BY ORVILLE DWYER

Purchase of the Palmer House for 19 million dollars was announced yesterday by C. N. Hilton, head of the Hilton Hotels of America chain. Hilton Feb. 15 bought Chicago's Stevens, the world's largest hotel, for a reported 7½ million dollars.

He also announced he is moving headquarters of the chain, now consisting of 14 hotels in 11 cities with a capacity of 10,200 rooms, from Los Angeles, Cal., to Chicago.

Chicago "Great Hotel Town"

Hilton, who started his career about 40 years ago in the first Hilton hotel in his native San Antonio, N. M., a hamlet of 500, asserted he has great faith in Chicago, particularly because of the city's "strategic and geographical location."

"They're flying planes across the top of the world from here now," he commented. "There's no question that, because of its location, Chicago is and always will be one of the greatest hotel towns in the world."

Hilton said he has concluded an agreement with the Potter Palmer estate for the purchase of all the outstanding securities of the Palmer House company. He added that several prominent Chicagoans were associated with him in the purchase and that a new board of directors and officers soon will be announced. The Palmer House, he said, will be taken over before Jan. 1.

11 Million Loan on Hotel

Hilton emphasized that the new financing for the Palmer House purchase was all done in Chicago, including the making of a new mortgage. It was explained that the original loan on the hotel was for 17 millions with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company of Milwaukee, Wis.

This loan, for 20 years at 5¼ per cent, was made in 1924. The interest rate was gradually reduced and the mortgage paid down to $15,400,000 by 1942, when another for that amount was negotiated with the insurance company. This had been reduced to around 11 million dollars and a new loan for that amount for 10 years entered the present transaction. It was made by the First National Bank of Chicago.

Thus, Hilton paid "something over 8 millions in cash" to conclude the deal.

The Palmer estate was represented in the deal by Frederick C. Hack of the law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw, who corroborated Hilton's statements. William J. Friedman of Gottlieb & Schwartz represented Hilton.

Chicagoans Buy in New York

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—State Supreme Court Justice Bernard Botein today authorized sale of Hotel Warwick to A. S. Kirkeby, Inc., Chicago hotel operators, for $2,335,000. 'BALEFUL EYED WITCH' IS FREE AFTER 13 YEARS

Wins in New Trial of Old Death Case

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 10 [Special]—The "witch of Delray," central figure 13 years ago in a murder trial which ended in her conviction and a life sentence after bizarre testimony linking her to 11 other deaths, was a free woman tonight by reason of a "not guilty" verdict in a belated retrial.

She is Mrs. Rose Veres, now 64, who for many years kept a rooming house and purchased insurance on the lives of most of her roomers. The rooming house was a two story frame building in what was formerly the village of Delray. This community, made up for the most part of Hungarian and middle European immigrants, is now a part of Detroit.

Son Convicted, Too

At the retrial a jury of eight men and four women took eight hours to vote an acquittal for the widely known "witch," who was convicted originally with her son, William, of first degree murder for killing Stephen Mack, a roomer, by pushing him out an attic window.

Mrs. Veres and her son served 13 years of their life sentences and recently won new trials on a Supreme court ruling that their convictions were invalid because of the absence from the courtroom of the presiding judge when the verdict was returned.

Courtroom Is Packed

When the new trials were ordered, prosecuting authorities released William Veres without a retrial, but ordered Mrs. Veres to stand trial again. The retrial began Nov. 26 before Recorder's Judge Paul E. Krause, and each day's session has been in a courtroom packed with present and former Delray neighbors and residents. Mrs. Veres speaks no English and testified thru an interpreter.

Evidence was produced at both trials that Mrs. Veres' rooming house had the local reputation of a "ho..e of death" because of the deaths there of 11 persons other than Mack between 1924 and 1931. Children feared her, it was said, because of her long hair and reported "baleful eye," and the name "witch of Delray" was applied to her.

When Mack died from a fall from Mrs. Veres' attic window he had a $4,000 insurance policy, of which Mrs. Veres was beneficiary. Police later found 75 insurance policies in the names of roomers.

MORSE ASSAILS DOUBLE TALK IN G.O.P. PLATFORM

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—Sen. Morse [R., Ore.] said today the "so-called congressional platform of Republican principles" adopted at a meeting in Chicago last week "is a great disappointment to me."

The Oregonian said in a statement the platform was "another stillbirth of political hope for the party."

Morse said he believes voters would send a majority of Republicans to the house and senate in 1946 "if the Republican candidates will support specific legislative proposals which seek to meet the issues now pending before congress.

"Fortunately, the rank and file of Republican and independent voters are ready to vote for Republican candidates who are willing to say 'yes' or 'no' and not 'maybe' and 'perhaps.' It is time for the Republican party to realize that a large majority of the voters are ready to support the Republican party if it offers a progressive and constructive program."

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 10 (AP)—Marine 1st Lt. Tyrone Power, 31, motion picture actor, who has been a marine since August, 1942, received his terminal leave papers here today and asserted, "I am glad I got in—and, I'm glad to get out." Power said he and his wife, Annabella, would leave for their home at Brentwood, Cal.

SEPARATE ARMY AIR DEPARTMENT URGED IN BILLS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—The chairmen of the house military and naval committees today introduced bills to make a separate department of the army air forces.

"This is our answer to the unification proposals," Rep. May [D., Ky.] and Rep. Vinson [D., Ga.] said in a joint statement.

"We believe unification of the army and the navy is not the answer to the problem of national defense under modern methods of warfare. In our opinion the answer is to be found in the creation of a separate and independent air force."

New Department Asked

The chairmen offered identical bills which called for:

1. Creation of a new department of the air forces, headed by a secretary who would be a cabinet member.
2. Establishment of an aviation academy which would be a counterpoint of West Point and Annapolis and would train air officers.
3. Establishment of the joint chiefs of staff—army, navy, and air forces—in the executive office of the President.
4. Abolition of the army air corps and the army air forces, and transfer of their property and equipment to the new department, as soon as the President proclaims the new air arm sufficiently organized to operate "as an efficient force."

Their Own Idea

May and Vinson told reporters the legislation was their own idea and did not necessarily reflect the views of the army or the navy.

In proposing their plan for three departments, the two said that "since naval aviation presents an entirely different problem of national defence," the legislation would not affect the air arm of the navy.

"With the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki," they declared, "the air force took or a new role. No longer will air power be limited in its use to supporting operations for the ground forces and the sea forces. Even now it has the potentiality of conducting effective warfare independently of those forces. To develop that potentiality to its fullest extent requires that the air force be, in fact, independent."

The bills were introduced as Capitol hill heard unofficially that President Truman was not ready to send to congress this week his message dealing with unification of the fighting forces and as the senate military committee continued hearings on merger proposals.

Adm. Luis de Florez, assistant chief of the navy's office of research and inventions, today testified before the senate committee, which is holding hearings on a proposed merger, that unification of the army and the navy might impede scientific development.

He said he considered competition between the services the factor most responsible for the development of radar, the atomic bomb, and other discoveries.

GATES RESIGNS POST AS NAVAL SECRETARY AIDE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—President Truman today accepted the resignation of Artemus L. Gates as navy under secretary. The resignation is effective Dec. 31.

The White House said Gates offered his resignation last September but that the President persuaded him to remain until the end of the year.

Gates became under secretary July 3 after service since 1941 as assistant secretary of the navy for air. He was a flyer during World War I, and came to the navy from the presidency of the New York Trust company.

NONCHALANCE SCARES BANDIT OUT OF HOLDUP

Daniel Cercone, of 3445 Grace st., attendant at a service station at 1750 Foster av., was being robbed yesterday by a man with a .45 caliber automatic when a friend, William NcNeil, a part time car washer at the station, walked by.

"Hi, Dan," McNeil called.

"Hi, Bill," said Cercone.

Flustered, the robber drove away in a car accompanied by another man and two women. Cercone said they did not pay for 10 gallons of gasoline.

NAVY PUBLICITY OFFICES WILL BE REOPENED SOON

The 9th naval district, which recently closed all of its branch public relations offices except the one in Chicago, soon will reopen or open new branches in 12 middlewestern cities, a district spokesman said last night. He said the branches were closed last month to centralize activity, but it had been determined that newsgathering agencies could not be properly serviced from district headquarters at Great Lakes.

Asked if the branches will publicize the navy department's view on unification of the armed services he said, "Anything to be given out about the navy's plan for national security will be given out thru the branches."

EXPERT FINDS U. S. CREATING GERMAN HATRED

Laird Bell Reports on Washington Policy

Laird Bell, Chicago lawyer who returned recently from service with the American group occupying Germany, told the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at a luncheon meeting yesterday that American policy is generating an explosive hatred toward this country and that it may be too late to correct it.

"Our policy in Germany is wrong," he said. "It is a policy designed to punish Germany. It is designed not to prevent her from again plunging into war, but, I believe, rather to invite such a war.

Policy of Retribution

"The policy that has evolved is one of retribution. It tears down, it punishes, it calls for years of suppression, if not oppression. It was conceived in hate and born in war hysteria."

Embodied in the policy framed in Washington, D. C., and handed to Gen. Eisenhower to carry out, is the plan of Henry Morgenthau Jr., former secretary of the treasury, to strip Germany of its industries and make it an isolated nation of peasant farmers, Bell said.

"Morgenthau suggests that the Germans will thus have a healthy outdoor life and Europe will be at peace."

As it has worked out, he reported, Germany is faced with mass starvation.

"The talk of starvation is not fanciful," he said. "Fifty per cent of the population in Berlin will die of disease or starvation this winter.

People Blame Americans

"Now they blame us. The longer we stay, the longer we will be identified with their troubles. The sooner we get away from it all, the better."

"When I left Germany there were 103,000 Germans, many of them not Nazis, in prison in the American sector alone," he added. "No one seemed to know what was to happen to them.

"Our indiscriminate condemnation of whole categories of Germans creates a mass of men, almost certainly including the most aggressive and competent elements of the nation, as well as the vigorous young men fired with the supreme philosophy, who are to be kept in servitude for the rest of their lives.

"They can have no hope for a decent life, unless they break out of servitude. We thus insure an explosive element that will only await a new 'der tag' to throw off its chains.

Absolves Army Administrators

"This is not to say that the leading Nazis who formed their foul policies and carried out their bestial orders should not have deserved punishment. But I submit that by hounding all party members we are doing two things that bode ill for the future: We condemn our friends to blame for inevitable failure and we condemn the most vigorous elements of the people to a life without hope of anything but revenge."

Bell absolved the army officers administering the occupation. Policy is made in Washington, he said, and the men in the field only execute it.

NEARLY HALF OF GERMAN PLANTS GIVEN TO RUSSIA

BERLIN, Dec. 10 (AP)—The allied control council today announced allocation for reparations of industrial equipment valued at about $93,000,000 in the first batch of factories in western Germany to be turned over to the allies.

In monetary value, 47.8 per cent of the first allocation was given to Russia—including Poland's share. The remaining 52.2 per cent was allocated for division among 17 western nations, including the United States, Britain, and France.

Russia was allocated all or part of seven plants and the western nations all or part of 21. Only movable equipment is involved. The basis of valuation was the replacement value at 1938 reichsmark prices with allowances for war damage and depreciation. The list included several big names in German industry, including one Krupp plant, Blohm and Voss, and Kugel Fischer.

DRAFT DODGER DENIED PROBATION

The couple met while both were attending the University of Omaha.

SALES TAX NETS $8,687,000, NEW NOVEMBER HIGH

The Illinois department of revenue reported yesterday that state income from sales tax collections hit an all-time November high last month of $8,687,000, or 13 per cent over the sales tax revenue in November, 1944.

Motor fuel taxes in November amounted to $2,950,000, or 18 per cent above the amount for the same month last year. Cigaret taxes produced $1,165,000, or 14 per cent more than last year's figure, and public utility tax collections were $1,062,000, or 6 per cent over last year's figure.

The only state tax which produced less income in November than a year ago was the liquor tax. Collections dropped from $2,107,000 to $1,899,000. The decrease was attributed to the large number of tax stamps sold in October of this year.

30-YEAR VETERAN OF ARMY SWAPS YARNS WITH LEAR

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 10 (AP)—Sgt. Nathan Pruitt, 58, Negro with more than 30 years service in the army, was hurrying thru the Union station today when from behind him came a gruff shout:

"Pruitt."

Later explaining, "I knew there was brass in that voice," Pruitt executed a neat about-face, and saw a portly gentleman in civilian clothes. After a moment's puzzlement the sergeant exclaimed, "Why, Gen. Lear." And it was—the former deputy commander of ground forces in the European theater, Lt. Gen. Ben Lear and his wife. Two decades ago Lear was stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., and Pruitt was on his staff—as a stable boy.

GIFTS GO TODAY TO 2,000 ABOARD U. S. S. CHICAGO

Two thousand gift boxes for officers and men of the U. S. S. Chicago will be mailed today to San Pedro, Cal., where the ship is in port. Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, wife of the mayor and canteen chairman of Chicago's service men centers, worked with volunteers yesterday to complete the packaging and wrapping, a labor of more than two weeks. Each man will receive shaving cream, shaving lotion, a book, and a poker and card set. Recipients will be given a choice of a cigaret lighter, a fountain pen, or a leather folder for discharge papers.

THIEVES TAKE CLOTHING

BISHOP TELLS OF STARVATION, MISERY IN REICH

New York, Dec. 10 [Special]—A desolate, miserable Germany, suffering "unspeakable hardship" and crowded with some 10,000,000 wandering Germans streaming into the reich after being ejected from "their homes in territory once German," was described here today by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, who has just returned from a special mission to Germany.

Bishop Oxnam released his survey of conditions in the form of the report signed by all three members of the special church delegation, which a few weeks ago obtained the approval of President Truman to go to Germany to discuss rehabilitation, relief and spiritual problems with church leaders there.

Appeal to Send Clothing

Bishop Oxnam said that the delegation had traveled extensively thru Germany, visiting such centers as Frankfurt, Stuttgart, Munich, Nuremberg, and Berlin. While the delegation was always aware of the "story of concentration camps and of the responsibility of the German leaders and people" for the war, he said, it was nevertheless making an appeal to the government to permit churches and relief agencies in the United States to send such things as warm clothes to the Germans.

Declaring that "it is not generally known that the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration does not provide food or clothing for Germans," Bishop Oxnam urged the necessity of making a "wise and understanding approach" to the problem of Germany.

Torn from Homes

"These millions have been torn from their homes, their personal property taken from them, and forced to migrate to Germany under conditions that result in starvation and the unnecessary death of tens of thousands," the bishop's report declared.

They are without food, medical supplies, adequate clothing, shelter. Children and old people die en route. Many diseases are becoming epidemic, and the cruelty accompanying this evacuation will affect all of Europe."

The German people, the report stated, must be shown that the "period of transition is one that looks to a free and democratic Germany," and it called for the "christian church" to reëstablish fellowship with the new church of Germany."

Two Others on Mission

The other members of the deputation were Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill, chairman of the general commission on army and navy chaplains and bishop of Massachusetts of the Protestant Episcopal church, and Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the United Lutheran church in America and member of the department of reconstruction and interchurch aid of the World Council of Churches.

Jeweler Routs 3 Bandits in Gun Battle at Store

Louis Galvez routed three Negro hold-up men in a gun battle in his jewelry store at 3315 Cottage Grove av. last night, he told police. The Negro with the gun fired four shots at him, he said, and he fired three shots at the Negroes as they fled.

U.S. HANDS BACK PART OF BERLIN TO GERMAN RULE

Kreuzberg First Area to Be Returned

BY HENRY WALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Dec. 10—The United States military government today pulled out of Kreuzberg precinct, Berlin, and handed over administration of that area to German civil authorities. This, the first release of any German territory to local authorities, followed the American policy of handing back the country to the natives as fast as they prove their ability to handle the situation.

Kreuzberg, with a population of 200,000, is north of Tempelhof air field, adjoining the Russian sector. It is in the heart of Berlin and was 70 to 80 per cent destroyed by bombing and shelling. This presents a difficult task for the administration.

"We are not abandoning Kreuzbergers," said Col. Frank Howley, military governor of the American sector of Berlin. "We shall continue to feed them and will check how the civilian government functions.

"Our withdrawal is recognition that the low level work has been completed; nazis have been cleaned out and a government established that follows democratic principles.

"We first threw out Kreuzberg's house commandants, the little Hitlers, when the residents complained of tyranny over food and work cards. The burgomeister has distributed food satisfactorily and stamped out the black market, and the entire personnel, altho new to the jobs, function satisfactorily."

Howley praised the leaders of the military government who trained the German functionaries: Maj. Merle Smith, Jackson Heights, Long Island; Capt. Charles Leonetti, Alexandria, La.; Lt. H. Nowalsky, New Orleans, La., and Lt. E. Reidel.

She came in, all excited, a small green bottle in her hand.

"Can you tell me what was in this bottle, our neighbor's child just drank the contents. Only the maid is home and she is hysterical. She hasn't the slightest idea what was in it."

Our pharmacist removed the stopper, turned it over and the last drop fell in his hand. He examined it carefully for odor and taste and smiled.

REVEAL GOERING SOUGHT BOMBER TO ATTACK U. S.

Wanted Long Range Plane to Strike New York

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 10 (AP)—Nazi Air Chief Hermann Goering asked the German aircraft industry in 1938 to produce planes capable of carrying a five-ton bomb load to New York to "stop somewhat the mouths of the arrogant people over there," United States assistant prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman told the international military tribunal today.

As the American prosecution closed the case against the 21 Nazi defendants on the first count—conspiracy to wage aggressive war—documentary evidence piled up showing:

1. That Hitler planned in 1940 to seize Atlantic bases for future attacks upon the United States, but that six months later the Germans apparently lost taste for the project, and instead strove desperately to avoid embroilment with America while pushing Japan steadily into the war.

Discounted United States Navy

2. That German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka had low opnions of the United States navy, which Matsuoka was certain Japan's navy would be able to smash "without trouble."

3. That the Nazis made plans months in advance of the attack on Russia to strip the Russians of all food, necessities of life and raw materials.

4. That Ribbentrop, and other top Nazis tried desperately, with glowing accounts of the advantages thereof, to push Japan into the war against the Russians, but that the Japanese warily sidestepped such an attack.

5. That the Germans never envisioned an attack on Pearl Harbor as the first blow of the Japanese in the war, having told the Japanese the line of logical attack was at Singapore, but nevertheless when the Pearl Harbor attack came, Hitler and the top Nazis were pleased and heartily congratulated the Japanese.

Involved Big Promises

The Nazi plotting with the Japanese which resulted eventually in the Pearl Harbor attack involved grandiose and often fantastic promises by Ribbentrop, Alderman said.

As Alderman piled up documents involving Ribbentrop, the former champagne salesman was jibed repeatedly by Goering and Former Grand Adm. Erich Raeder. A few seats away sat former nazi security chief Ernst Kaltenbrunner, just out of the hospital.

Detested even by his fellow defendants, Kaltenbrunner was ignored when he attempted to shake hands with them.

The smile left Goering's face when the prosecution produced the secret speech he made to chiefs of the aircraft industry in 1938 with this assertion:

"I am still missing [lacking] entirely the bomber which flies with five tons of explosives to New York and back. I would be extremely happy to have such a bomber, so that I would at least be able to stop somewhat the mouths of the arrogant people over there."

Planned War on America

That German plans for war against the United States went forward in 1940 was disclosed in a secret letter written by a general at Hitler's headquarters. Dated Oct. 29, 1940, the letter introduced by Alderman said:

"The Fuehrer is at present occupied with the question of occupation of Atlantic islands, with a view to prosecution of war against America at a later date. The deliberations on this subject are being embarked upon here. The essential conditions are, at present:

"[A] No other operational commitment; [B] Portuguese neutrality; [C] Support of France and Spain."

Alderman also submitted a diary of the late Count Galeazzo Ciano, then Italian foreign minister, which said on Dec. 3 that the Japanese had reached a "dead end" with the United States, and had asked Italy to declare war on America as soon as the first Japanese blow was struck.

Tries New Legs

[TRIBUNE Photo]

Pvt. and Mrs. Paul Murphy leaving Melrose Park home yesterday as the war veteran went for a stroll on his new artificial legs.

An exploding land mine in Aachen, Germany, shortly before the Nazis hoisted the white flag launched Pvt. Paul L. Murphy, 29, of 1011 Broadway, Melrose Park, on a new career—treasurer of B. L. A. C. A.

Those initials stand for the Bilateral Leg Amputee Club of America, and the land mine qualified Murphy for membership by blowing off both of his legs.

Murphy, who has two artificial legs and a cane, was home yesterday for the first time in several years. He wore a discharge button on his lapel and a broad grin on his face. The grin was shared by his pretty wife, Rose, and his mother, Mrs. Gerald Murphy.

The veteran strode back and forth across the living room a couple of times to demonstrate how man's ingenunity can triumph over nature.

Murphy said B. L. A. C. A.'s foremost aim is to develop a foundation which will perform research toward improving artificial limbs.

Murphy, who has been a patient in Bushnell General hospital, Utah, said B. L. A. C. A. has 75 members and is expecting to recruit many more.

REPORT 75,000 SOVIET TROOPS IN NORTH IRAN

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—An expedition of 2,000 fresh American troops recently sent into Iran as replacements for high point men will be withdrawn this month along with all other United States forces there totaling under 4,000.

This was learned at the state department today in response to inquiries. The department also furnished as background information the fact that an estimated 75,000 Russian troops are now in northern Iran and upwards of 5,000 British combat soldiers are in southwestern Iran.

15 Times More Than British

The Russians thus have 15 times as many combat troops as the British in the troubled middle eastern country, according to the reports reaching the state department from Tehran.

While the Russians have their forces in strength in Azerbaijan province, the total of Iranian troops already in the province or seeking to go there over Russian objections in order to put down rebel forces is 6,500.

The Russians and the British are supposed to get out by March 2. The state department said that it had not yet received a reply from the note to Britain proposing withdrawal of all allied troops by Jan. 1, the American deadline, altho Russia replied about 10 days ago rejecting the American proposal.

Removal of the less than 6,000 United States noncombat troops—the only ones left in Iran—may disrupt operation of the army's air transport command route from the United States to India by way of Europe or Africa.

Would Transport Stop

To avoid a shutdown, officials here disclosed, the Iranian government has started negotiations with Transcontinental and Western Air Lines of the United States to operate the big ATC field at Abadan temporarily.

This operation, according to state department information, would last only until next spring, under the proposed agreement with TWA, and at that time the way-stop on the route to India would be shifted to a new army air transport command field new being constructed at Dahran, Saudi Arabia.

IRAN PREMIER CALLS FOR FAST REMOVAL OF FOREIGN TROOPS

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 10 (AP)—Premier Mahmed Hakimi today called for the immediate evacuation of foreign troops from Iran. He said he still was hopeful that direct discussions with the soviet government would "produce the desired results" in establishing Iran's security.

"The Iran government is ready to take any steps necessary to reassure the soviet government and nations generally of its sincere desire to strengthen good relations with the soviet," he said at a press conference.

He said any suggestions made by the united nations organization in regard to Iran would be "gladly welcomed," and that Iran has "confidence the three great powers will honor the tri-partite treaty and Tehran declaration and remove troops as soon as possible."

A special six-man council has been established to direct Iranian affairs during the emergency.

BRITISH, NATIVES MASS FOR FULL SCALE JAVA WAR

Expect Indonese March on Batavia

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 10 (AP)—The British command clamped war time secrecy on troop movements and communications in Java today as a prelude to full scale military operations against Indonesian Nationalist forces.

Tension mounted in the turbulent island, amid reports that large concentrations of natives were massing in the suburbs of Batavia for a march upon the capital. British troops were alerted.

The Aneta news agency said the Jogjakarta division of the Indonesian republic's central national committee has urged President Soekarno and Premier Sutan Sjahrir to remove the Indonesian government immediately from Batavia to the interior.

New Uprising Rumored

Rising British anger with the Nationalists was apparent as rumors persisted that they planned a new uprising on a large scale by the week's end. An official British announcement put British casualties in Java for the period from Oct. 1 thru Dec. 5 at 916, including 145 killed, 604 wounded, and 167 missing.

Thirteen royal air force Mosquito bombers and Thunderbolts assaulted the mountain village of Tjibadak, 50 miles south of Batavia, in the heaviest air strike of the Nationalist rebellion. The village was reported smashed and burning after an hour long attack.

The Mosquitos had dropped 1,000 warning leaflets telling the population the village would be destroyed and urging the people to flee immediately. Two other villages near Tjibadak-Kampa and Tjimahi were also blasted by R. A. F. planes.

Battle with Convoy

The air assaults followed a battle between Indonesian and British troops escorting a convoy bringing relief supplies for the summer capital at Bandoeng. In the fight one British officer, one British enlisted man, and 14 Indian enlisted men were killed and 30 Indian troops were wounded. Most of the convoy got thru.

The Aneta news agency said an R. A. F. regiment in Batavia fired 1,000 rounds into an area east of the Kemajoran air field. Fighting was reported in progress northeast of Kramjat, another troublesome capital suburb.

STRIKE CUTS OFF N. SOUTH WALES LIGHTS AT 9 P.M.

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 10 [Reuters]—The New South Wales cabinet today approved further drastic cuts in power consumption, starting from midnight tonight, to meet fuel shortages caused by the coal strike.

As the result of the new cuts, all lights must be turned out in private homes after 9 p. m. Toasters, vacuum cleaners, and electric irons are banned and radios may be used for only one hour a day.

Cooking and water heating will be permitted only between 5:30 p. m. and 7 p. m. on week days and 11:30 and 1 p. m. on Sundays, but at any time for sick persons.

Broadcasting will be restricted to one hour in the evening and there will be no power for wharves, churches, rest homes, day nurseries, and baby clinics. Hospitals may use power only for treatment of the sick and must do their own laundry.

WOMAN POSTAL WORKER LOSES JOB TO VETERAN

Miss Muriel Case, 1001 N. Dearborn st., a student at the Art institute and a former teacher in an Atchison [Kas.] school, enjoyed a brief job as mail carrier yesterday before she was removed from her duties by postoffice authorities here. Miss Case was working out of the Chestnut st. postoffice.

Postmaster Kruetgen had ordered that all mail carrier jobs be given to veterans as long as there are enough available.

Assistant Postmaster Werner said Miss Case was removed to make room for a veteran, that the supply of veterans is expected to last another week, and after that civilians will be employed. Miss Case carried mail last Christmas, and says she was the first woman mail carrier in Chicago.

FIND 3 OUT OF 4 GIs WHO DIED IN BURMA THEATER

Move Many Bodies to Main Cemeteries

BY ALFRED WAGG

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NEW DELHI, India, Hdq. U. S. Forces in India-Burma, Dec. 10—Long clothed behind what is assumed here to be necessary secrecy are details of what is being done with the bodies of American troops who fell on Burma battlefields and thruout the Burma theater from Kashmir, India, to Siam [Thailand].

Explaining the nature of its task of locating the many bodies along jungle combat paths and in far-off valleys where aircraft crashed, the theater quartermaster's office in charge of burials and registration of graves said today that 3,000 of a possible 4,000 bodies had been located and registered, with only 125 still unidentified. Identification is established thru identification tags, finger prints, teeth charts, and clothing or equipment.

The quartermaster said plans had been made to assemble the bodies in four temporary cemeteries, where the graves can be looked after and whence the bodies can be sent to America should the war department eventually so direct. These cemeteries, the quartermaster said, are receiving the bodies by air from Burma, India, 15 smaller cemeteries, and from jungle areas being searched by rescue teams.

Roads Lead to Cemeteries

The four main receiving cemeteries are on rail lines in areas readily reached by motor cars. Only one cemetery will remain undisturbed in Burma. It is the burial ground at Myitkyina, site of the bloodiest battle fought by Americans in that country. The number of graves there totals almost 1,000.

The largest cemetery in India will be in Calcutta, with another, capable of receiving 2,000 bodies, at Kalaikunda, about 80 miles from Calcutta. Kalaikunda was the former base of the India based B-29 bomber squadrons.

A second and smaller cemetery will also be at Calcutta. More than 800 Yanks already have been buried there. The soil is part of the governor of Bengal's estate.

The fourth cemetery is at Karachi, India, where interments have begun. The graves are all carefully marked after definite identification has been assured.

Planes Guide Jungle Hunt

Teams are searching almost impassable jungle areas for the bodies of Americans killed in plane crashes or buried in isolated spots where they died in battle. Plane crashes are held responsible for more than 50 per cent of the GI deaths in the India-Burma theater, with combat wounds, natural deaths, and accidents following in order.

The jungle searching parties make long treks to areas where it is believed bodies may be found. Away from their bases for weeks at a time, they are supplied from the air. They often are guided by planes, which supply the canvas pouches in which the bodies are removed.

It is estimated that all bodies that can be recovered will have been moved to receiving cemeteries by March 1.

EISENHOWER NO. 1 GENERAL OF WAR, NAZIS BELIEVED

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 10 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower was regarded by German general staff officers as the greatest general of the war because of his able planning, daring and the extent of his authority.

The opinion of general staff officers who served on all fronts was disclosed by Maj. Gen. Erwin Lahousen, star prosecution witness in the war crimes trial and chief of sabotage in the German intelligence service, in an exclusive interview with the Associated Press.

Patton Greatest in Field

Lahousen said that Marshal Zhukov of the Red army, British Field Marshal Montgomery, and German Field Marshl Fritz Erich von Manstein ranked close behind "Gen. Ike" in ability, in the evaluation of the German commanders. He said they also believed that Gen. Maxime Weygand of France might have shown equal mettle if the French had not surrendered so early.

The critically injured Gen. Patton was considered the best and most feared of the American field commanders, Lahousen said.

"Eisenhower had the broader view," said Lahousen, "and was the greatest planner of the war. He had what all great commanders must have if they are to realize their potentialities—full authority to make any decision he chose."

Of the Russian campaign, he asserted, "It became quite clear that the soviet state had been able to give their people an idea to fight for, in contrast to the old imperial armies of the czars."

Russian Infantry Lags

Lahousen said that in his opinion Russian armor and frontline aircraft were superior, as operational forces, to the Russian infantry.

"No one can take anything away from the British and American infantry, but those of us who lived under American bombers by day and British bombers by night, and felt the pressure of their armor day and night find it difficult to give the infantry all it deserves," he said.

GANDHI ECHOES WAVELL APPEAL FOR DISCIPLINE

Ignore British Threats, Nehru Tells Indians

CALCUTTA, India, Dec. 10 [Reuters] — Mohandas Gandhi tonight echoed an appeal for calm and discipline made earlier by Field Marshal Wavell, viceroy of India, while Pandit Jawahrlal Nehru, Congress party leader told Indians to disregard "threats by British ministers or highly placed officers" and to "go on building up your strength peacefully."

Addressing a crowd which gathered outside Government house to greet him after his 50 minute talk with Wavell, Gandhi said: "I have come here to serve you and the country. You can attain freedom only by peace and discipline."

Holds Agreement Possible

During his two hour visit to Government house, Gandhi also saw Lt. Gen. Arthur Smith, head of the Indian eastern command. It was officially stated that the talks did not signify the opening of negotiations with the Congress party.

In a speech at the annual meeting of the Indian associated chambers of commerce, Wavell said that India was faced with her greatest opportunity. The British government and people sincerely wish the Indian people to have political freedom and a government of their own choice, Wavell asserted. He added that he did not believe that an agreement between the Indian parties was impossible.

Nehru Issues Defi

Nehru, speaking at a public meeting, referred to the statement by Pethick-Lawrence, secretary of state for India, in the house of lords last week, in which he announced that a parliamentary delegation would go to India and cautioned against any Indian atrempt to resolve the constitutional issue by force.

"The days when people were frightened by threats from high quarters are over. India is ours so our voice must prevail, if not today then tomorrow," said Nehru.

EXPECT JEWS TO CO-OPERATE WITH INQUIRY

Zionist Council to Hear Decisions Today

BY ALEX SMALL
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

JERUSALEM, Dec. 10—The executive committee of the Jewish agency tomorrow will submit to the Zionist council the decisions it has taken after more than a week of debate.

The most important point to be decided is whether the Jewish agency is to coöperate with the Anglo-American inquiry commission or ignore it. Despite vigorous pleas made by partisans of noncoöperation led by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, O., who arrived here recently, it is learned that the majority probably will favor coöperating with the Bevin-Truman commission.

The argument proving the most persuasive for this decision is the desire of the Jewish agency to show that it is responsive to the first American move toward participating in Palestine affairs.

Further, it now seems unlikely that the executive committee will pass a resolution requesting Dr. Chaim Weizmann to resign as head of the world Zionist organization.

Arab League Mystifies

On the Arab side of this controversy, Arab leaders are mystified and discouraged by the ambiguous, pussyfooting reaction to the Bevin-Truman plans for Palestine as announced from Cairo at the conclusion of the Arab league's meetings.

"I cannot imagine what they mean by saying they are opposed to further Jewish immigration if it is allowed as a result of Zionist pressure," said Dr. Hussein el Khaldi, leader of the Arab reform party and one of the most respected Arab nationalist leaders. "Our stand has been that we want no more Jewish immigrants in Palestine under any circumstances."

The Arab league's retreat from its former position has increased among local Arab leaders the suspicion that their interests are being sacrificed in some political game the league is playing. Some of them say that certain prominent figures of the Arab league are or might as well be British agents.

The boycott of Palestine Zionist products which is supposed to begin with the new year is causing some alarm. Jewish opinion, however, affects to view it with equanimity, saying that this will hurt the Arabs more than any one else.

Keep Eye on Turkey

While primarily engrossed in their own troubles, the people of Palestine still keep their eyes on whatever mischief is brewing on their northern horizon. The announcement that Turkey is accepting the American suggestion to discuss the Montreux convention and the problem of the Dardanelles brought a feeling of relief here and the conviction that serious trouble has been postponed.

The Turkish move is regarded as a British maneuver, since it is known that Turkey today has only two choices in her foreign policy—meekly to submit to Russian pressure, or equally meekly to take any course prescribed by their British advisers.

The British policy as exercised thru Turkey is seen here as a move to gain time wherein the Russians may be induced to take less aggressive action in the middle east, or at worst, to give the British time to complete the installation of their middle east entrenched camp in southern Palestine and the Sinai peninsula [Egypt].

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Dec. 11—Washington as an Envoy

ON Dec. 11, 1753, George Washington, an adjutant general in the service of Virginia, arrived at Fort Le Boeuf, which was at or near the present site of Waterford, in northwestern Pennsylvania, after a grueling six weeks' journey from his home in Virginia.

He bore a message from Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia to the French commandant at Le Boeuf warning the latter that the French were guilty of trespass in building posts in country which, according to Dinwiddie's reasoning, was a part of the colony of Virginia and subject to the British crown.

The French commandant, Leguardier de St. Pierre, received the 21 year old envoy courteously, but refused to accede to Dinwiddie's demand that the French quit the western country. [The French based their claims to much of the watershed of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers on the 17th century explorations of their compatriots.]

To the Virginia governor's peremptory letter St. Pierre indited a reply full of Gallic polish and complimentary references to both Dinwiddie and Washington. It was signed "Your most humble and most obedient servant."

However, St. Pierre declared that he did not think himself obliged to accede to Dinwiddie's demand.

After another harrowing wilderness journey in the course of which Washington was once shot at by a treacherous Indian and once nearly lost his life when he fell from a raft in the Allegheny river, he reached Virginia and wrote a report of his journey. The military career thus begun lasted, in its first phase, five years. With the British and the Virginians, Washington took part in some successful and some disastrous forays against the French and their Indian allies.

LAST OF 'OLD 33D' RETURNS TO U. S. ON ARMY VESSEL

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 10 [Special]—Last of the original 33d division, formerly the Illinois national guard, tonight returned to the United States aboard the army transport General W. G. Haan. The transport carried 3,050 army passengers who boarded her at Nagoya, Japan, Nov. 28.

Among the Chicago men in the contingent was Maj. Samuel T. Lawton Jr., commander of the 210th field artillery battalion, and son of Maj. Gen. Samuel T. Lawton Sr., retired, who again will command the division when it is released from federal service and becomes a national guard unit.

Other Chicago and Illinois men who returned are Maj. John Savage of Joliet, division surgeon; Capt. John J. Naughton of Chicago, supply officer of the 210th field artillery, and Maj. Thomas Cummings of Gardner, Ill., medical corpsman. The troops will be processed at Fort Lewis for redistribution to home separation centers.

NEW ZEALAND'S SOCIAL SECURITY EATS UP TAXES

BY QUENTIN POPE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Dec. 10—Six hundred thousand dues paying New Zealanders, receiving their new social security receipt books this week, learned that their government calculates maintaining collections of the tax until the end of 1951, and wondered whether the plan would last until then. The cost of the social security program now exceeds one-third of the national income when the plan began in 1939.

The nation this week had learned that the social security budget next year would touch $73,000,000. This sum was almost sufficient to provide for the whole process of government, including the generous social services, in the late 1920s, when the country was richer than it has ever been since.

In addition, workers were told that their already burdensome wage tax of 5 cents on the dollar will be insufficient to pay for the widened operations of the social security fund in 1946 and must therefore be stepped up to 7½ cents. Oppositionists believe that even this increase is insufficient and that once the 1946 elections are over the Labor government will push the wage tax to 10 cents.

Benefits Called Meager

What the government provides for these taxes has been called "a swindle" by officials who aided in marshaling facts for administration leaders to study. Its age benefits are nominally higher than those of pre-Laborite days, but actually are materially lower because of inflated prices. A man cannot qualify for certain benefits as long as he owns a sum in excess of $2,500.

Under the system of medical care all the best physicians have become specialist consultants to protect themselves against an influx of patients suffering imaginary ills, and consequently won't visit homes any more.

Highlights of social security on the New Zealand model as revealed during the six years of operation are, first, the steady rise of its cost to critical totals; second, the obsession of government leaders with the plan and efforts to maintain it by devices seeking to stabilize national income at the expense of dynamic growth; third, the policy of bribing the electorate each voting time with promises of more benefits.

Tax Burden Is Great

The addition of social security charges to other taxes constitutes a real burden for those in little better than average circumstances in this far from rich man's country. At the bottom end of the wage scale the situation is the same. Even before tax rates were ballooned 50 per cent by the new decision, a boy starting under the plan at the age of 18 at $7.50 a week and moving up by annual raises to $25 weekly at the age of 30 has had more than $5,500 taken from him in wage tax by the government.

Restriction of immigration is a factor against the success of the security system. In 1936, New Zealand's population had grown 141,000 above the 1926 level and stood at 1,600,000. But in 1936 there were 16,000 fewer children under 10 years than there were a decade earlier.

This is why New Zealanders wonder this week if social security will be functioning when their new receipt books are used up. Those children under 10 in 1936 will be expected to bear a heavy burden in 1951. Each group of four will be supporting at least one pensioner, probably more, since there were 268,000 beneficiaries in the first year the plan operated.

Speaking of Legs . . .

In these days of probable change, many a business is seeking to put an extra leg under the table in the form of a new product or a new market.

That's a sound program in many instances.

But it is sound only if the final decision is preceded by a study of the product, the distribution, the competition, the market, the volume and profit potential.

We are currently engaged in several such studies for Henri, Hurst & McDonald clients. Because pre-analysis has always been standard procedure in this agency, there is already in existence the organization set-up and the experience which are important in new product or new market research.

LEWIS BLASTS TRUMAN PLAN AS 'FOUL SMELLING'

Business Joins Attack in Milder Terms

BY WILLARD EDWARDS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10—Congress entered today upon a week of hectic debate over strike legislation with President Truman's formula for solving industrial disputes the target of criticism from representatives of both business and labor.

John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine workers, reached deep into his bag of vituperative adjectives and came up with "foul smelling, evil mess" as a description of Mr. Truman's plan to employ fact finding boards in major industrial squabbles, with 30 day bans on strikes while the boards were recommending solutions.

More moderate opposition was expressed by Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who urged no action on "hasty legislation" before next year while approving the fact finding process as "a new and useful tool" to be employed with caution.

Appear Before Group

Both Lewis and Johnston appeared before the house labor committee which began consideration of the Truman proposal.

The President meanwhile went ahead with the selection of a fact finding board to investigate the General Motors strike even tho action on his requested legislation appeared dubious.

"Strike week" in both house and senate will be observed as follows:

1. The house begins floor consideration tomorrow of a military committee bill which would restrict political activity by unions and penalize them for striking in violation of contract pledges. Whether this will be forced to a vote remains in doubt.

2. The senate labor committee Wednesday begins consideration of the Presidential plan.

3. The house Wednesday is scheduled to open debate on a substitute for the so-called "full employment" legislation repeatedly demanded by Mr. Truman.

"Make More Money Now"

Lewis told the house committee that the government could settle the General Motors strike in 10 days if it would allow the manufacturers a price which would permit a fair profit.

"The [G. M.] are making more money now for not making cars than if they were producing them full blast, because of the present tax laws," he testified. "And the poor, blundering leaders of the United Automobile workers picked this time of all times to shut down General Motors when it would make more money not operating than producing."

The President's plan, Lewis continued, would "be the first drastic thrust of the knife of absolutism into the heart of a free America."

"He's Not an Expert"

The plan, he said, was designed only to "appease a few millionaires who find themselves frightened by the growing strength of labor."

Referring to the bill's provision that members of fact finding boards may receive as much as $100 a day, Lewis said that "labor department college professors" now receiving $20 a day would be the beneficiaries.

"Hasty legislation is usually ill advised," he told the committee. "Fact finding is a new technique. We should go slow about legislation dealing with it."

That the labor committee is in no hurry to act on the Truman plan was indicated when it adjourned until Wednesday when it will hear William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

UNION THWARTS VET IN BUILDING OF OWN GARAGE

Racine, Wis., Dec. 10 [Special]—A war veteran's plans to go into business for himself have been thwarted, it was learned today, by an ultimatum served on him by the AFL Building Laborers' union.

The action has halted construction of a motorcycle repair garage which the former service man, James E. Rohan, 25, was building with only his own labor and the unpaid help of a friend, Bud Pater, who has been home only a month after six years of military service.

Working Several Weeks

Rohan had been working on the building for several weeks, it was learned, when he was visited several days ago by Harry Sorensen, business agent of local 108 of the Building Laborers' union.

Sorenson told the prospective young business man that if he persisted in erecting his shop without hiring union members, he would be unable to hire union workers to install wiring and plumbing. It is the practice of city building inspectors in many communities to refuse to approve buildings in which wiring and plumbing work is not performed by union men.

Altho Rohan had not made efforts to hire electricians or plumbers, his work not having progressed that far, it was his intention to employ union men for that part of the job.

Veteran Stops Work

In a dilemma over the interruption of his plans, Rohan stopped work while he considered his prospects. He said he extended his credit to buy the land and materials for his building, and would be unable to open his business if he is compelled to hire union help for construction work.

"We don't work that way," Sorensen said, when he was asked about the matter. "If he wants to do it by himself he can go ahead, but he'll have to do it all without any union help. We union men won't work on a nonunion job."

BRITAIN OKAYS 14 HOPS WEEKLY FOR U. S. LINES

New York, Dec. 10 [Special]—The British government has authorized United States airlines to make 14 flights a week between New York and Hurn, nearest available airport for London, according to word from the British embassy in Washington tonight. How those flights will be distributed, according to the embassy statement, must be determined by American authorities. The 14 weekly flights are to be made at the one way fare of $375.

Tonight neither American Overseas Airlines officials nor those of Pan-American Airways had been advised of the British statement, which, the embassy said, had been communicated to the state department several days ago. Both, however, said they presumed that the flights would be evenly divided between the two companies.

American Airlines, which reduced its fare to London from New York to $375, from the war time level of $572, today in conformity with this reduction cut its fares from Boston to London and from Boston to Ireland. It had previously cut its fares from Chicago to London. Boston to London, by American is now $366 instead of $565 with the round trip rate of $658.80 instead of $1,017. The fare from Boston to Ireland has been set at $325 one way and $585 round trip.

26,000 SERVICE MEN DUE TO ARRIVE ON EAST, WEST COASTS

More than 13,000 service men are scheduled to arrive at east coast ports today and an additional 13,000 are due on the west coast.

Approximately 3,600 are due at New York, 8,400 at Boston, and 1,100 at Newport News, Va.

From the Pacific 4,000 personnel are scheduled to arrive at San Diego, 1,000 at Los Angeles, 2,700 at San Francisco, 1,400 at Portland, 3,600 at Tacoma, and 300 at Seattle.

3,11[4] Air, Radar Men Arrive

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 10 (AP)—The transport, Gen. William C. Langfitt, brought 3,117 army air and radar men here today from Leyte. The men were from the 100th bombardment squadron and companies A and B of the 574th signal air warning battalion, a radar operations group.

WARD $2,653 STOCK STOLEN

Theft of eight cases of clothing and a carton of watch straps, valued at $2,653, from the Montgomery Ward & Co. receiving dock at 618 W. Chicago av., was reported to police yesterday by Arthur Heltemer, head of the company's protective department.

BOWLING STORY OF HUBBY COSTS WIFE ALIMONY

Judge Elmer J. Schnackenberg in Circuit court yesterday denied a petition for temporary alimony filed by Mrs. Florence Wagner, 38, when her husband, Frank, 46, of 211 Maplewood rd., Riverside, owner of a trucking concern, accused her of misconduct.

In response to questioning by Joseph H. and Norman Becker, his attorneys, Wagner testified that his wife had refused to accompany him to a friend's home because she wanted to go bowling.

Wagner said he trailed her to the bowling alley, from which she and an unnamed man emerged presently. Mrs. Wagner got into her car and the man into his, Wagner continued, and both drove away. Wagner, with another man as a witness, followed, he said.

Several blocks from the bowling alley, Wagner went on, the two cars pulled up to the curb. Mrs. Wagner got into the man's car, he said. In about 20 minutes, Wagner said, he went over to the car and confronted the surprised couple.

Wagner, who has a divorce suit pending against his wife, charging adultery, was allowed to retain custody of their three children. Mrs. Wagner has a cross-complaint for divorce, which also charges adultery.

CIO THIRD PARTY WITH WALLACE IS SEEN BY AFL AID

Carmel Asserts Move Will Be Suicidal

The open break between the CIO and President Truman over the President's proposal for legislation setting up fact finding boards in labor disputes is part of the CIO's broad general program looking toward the establishment of a third party, Daniel D. Carmel, general counsel for the Illinois Federation of Labor and the Chicago Federation of Labor, charged last night. The next step, he predicted, will be the withdrawal of Henry Wallace from his cabinet post as secretary of commerce to take an active part in the new party.

Carmel, who spoke before the Industrial Relations Association of Chicago in the Chicago Bar association headquarters, 29 S. La Salle st., said that by becoming political rather than labor minded the CIO is sowing the seeds of its own destruction. In substantiation he drew a parallel between the growth of the CIO and that of the Knights of Labor in the 10 years prior to 1898.

Says Politics Unhorsed Knights

"The Knights of Labor, like the CIO," he said, "got into politics. At one time it had a membership of 3½ million. It claimed to have elected 10 governors and 90 congressmen. It started a third party. And then, within a three year period, it simply disintegrated. Its members fell away and joined other organizations more concerned with their labor problems than with politics.

"It has been the philosophy of the CIO from the beginning to be in politics rather than to be truly a labor organization."

Believes Truman Is Sincere

The charge of Philip Murray, CIO president, that President Truman's program is a "union busting" tactic was called absurd by Carmel, who added: "I think President Truman's proposal is earnest and well intended."

Carmel pointed out, however, that compulsory arbitration had been tried and abandoned in both England and New Zealand.

"This is something you can't compel," he said. "There has to be a willingness on the part of both labor and management to compromise their differences."

HEAR CIO GROUP TO SET DATE FOR STEEL WALKOUT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP)—A CIO United Steelworkers spokesman said tonight the union's 175 man wage policy committee will meet tomorrow to decide "the date of a nation-wide steel strike.

The spokesman, who declined use of his name, said the strike decision will be announced tomorrow afternoon. He added the walkout likely would be called "some time in January."

Union members in 27 states have already authorized the calling of a strike which would affect abo[ut] 650,000 steel workers.

EVIDENCE HINTS WOMAN CLINE BURIED NOT WIFE

Gold Fillings Found; Chicagoan Had None

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 10 [Special] — Gold teeth fillings were found tonight in an examination of the ashes of the woman who died in a Portland, Ore., hotel Nov. 29 under the name of Mrs. Delora Krebs Cline, former wealthy Chicago widow, it was announced by City Toxicologist Joseph Swim.

This discovery was viewed by San Francisco police as convincing evidence that some woman other than Mrs. Cline was the person whose death was reported as that of the former Chicago woman by her husband, Alfred L. Cline, 56, now held here on a forgery charge.

"We are now convinced that Cline is a murderer," said District Atty. Edmund G. Brown after an examination of Swim's report and other evidence obtained today from Portland. "Prosecution will be up to Portland authorities."

Other Findings Cited

San Francisco police revealed that an investigation by Portland police has uncovered several facts indicating definitely that the woman who died there not only was not Mrs. Cline but may have been Mrs. Isabelle Van Natta, 73, of San Francisco, missing since Nov. 17 when she told neighbors she was going to marry Cline.

These facts were summed up by police as follows: The woman who died in Portland had her own teeth, brown-gray hair and brown eyes and was a sufferer from arthritis. Mrs. Delora Krebs Cline had false teeth, white hair and blue eyes, and was never known to have been an arthritis victim. The woman who died in Portland, while bearing a superficial facial resemblance to Mrs. Cline, was from two to three inches shorter than Mrs. Cline.

Police said Mrs. Van Natta is described by neighbors as a woman with brown-gray hair and brown eyes. These neighbors also said Mrs. Van Natta had her own teeth and had had "considerable" dental work.

Arrested Last Week

A report from Portland police quoted the minister who conducted funeral services for the supposed Mrs. Cline as saying Cline had pointed to the dead woman's swollen hands and commented that her arthritis had improved somewhat during a visit he said they made to Hot Springs, Ark.

Cline arrived in Portland with a woman he said was his wife on Nov. 24 and her death five days later was certified by a local physician as due to cerebral hemmorhage. His arrest in San Francisco last week resulted from an investigation begun in Chicago by relatives of the former Mrs. Krebs who said they had had no direct contact with her since October, 1944. Cline married her in Chicago in May, 1944, after a short courtship beginning with a meeting on a train.

Other Deaths Probed

From Los Angeles came an announcement by Dist. Atty. Fred Howser of Los Angeles county, that he will move to reopen investigation into the deaths here 12 years ago of another of Cline's wives, Mrs. Bessie Van Sickle Cline, and her brother, Lucas Brandt McCreery. This Mrs. Cline left Cline $26,000.

These bodies were exhumed in 1933 after the arrest of Cline on a forgery charge at that time. No traces of poison were found, Howser said, but he intends now to reëxamine all files in the cases.

In Santa Ana, Mrs. W. L. Blencoe, sister of Mrs. Elizabeth Hunt Lewis, asked police assistance in clearing up the mystery of the disappearance of Mrs. Lewis three years ago. She said that after her sister vanished she learned property in Oakland and Richmond had been disposed of and tax records forwarded to "A. L. Cline, St. Petersburg, Fla."

TRACE $200,000 ESTATE

Alfred Leonard Cline, ex-convict who married the wealthy Chicago widow, Mrs. Delora Krebs, here in May, 1944, was disclosed yesterday to have become joint owner of more than $200,000 of her fortune before her supposed death in a Portland, Ore., hotel last Nov. 29.

Names of 12 Chicago women found in notebooks in Cline's hotel room were announced by San Francisco police. These were among names of 60 women from all parts of the country listed by the ex-convict.

Four of the Chicago women mentioned in Cline's notebook said yesterday they knew Mrs. Krebs but had not met, or heard Mrs. Krebs mention, Cline. Mrs. Levi Hale, 8241 Dante av., a close friend of Mrs. Krebs for 30 years, said she last saw Mrs. Krebs in September, 1944, at a dinner at the Hale home. She had always received a Christmas card from her but failed to get one last year, she said.

Miss Marie Hummel, 1412 W. Elmdale av.; Mrs. Nan Cook, 6907 Lakewood av., and Mrs. Izak Devos, 611 W. Addison st., also listed in the book, said they were acquainted with Mrs. Krebs but none had seen her since August, 1944.

Deposit Box Opened

John T. Dempsey, public administrator of Cook county, appeared before Probate Judge John F. O'Connel yesterday and obtained letters of administration for the estate of Mrs. Delora Krebs Cline. Jack Rubens, chief investigator for Dempsey's office, then went to the First National bank here and opened a safety deposit box held jointly in the names of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Cline.

The safety deposit box was drilled open and Rubens said its contents included $17,000 in United States savings bonds, $2,300 in currency, and jewelry valued at $2,000.

Homer Andreas, attorney representing the heirs of the former Mrs. Krebs, said inquiry to the stock transfer department of the Commonwealth Edison company has revealed that 4,664 shares of Commonwealth Edison stock, currently valued at $165,000 and inherited by Mrs. Delora Krebs Cline from her first husband, are now listed as the joint property of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Cline.

Vault in Columbus

Cline's name was added as a co-owner of this stock on the books of the company in July, 1944, it was said. This was about two months after his marriage to the wealthy widow and about two months before her relatives here lost track of her.

Attorneys for the heirs said inquiry in Columbus has disclosed that a joint checking account in the Huntington bank there contains $19,000 in the names of Mr. and Mrs. Cline and that Cline has $2,500 in a separate account of his own.

The attorneys said the Columbus bank also has a safety deposit box in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Cline and that several packages addressed to Cline have arrived there in recent months and are being held for him in the bank's vaults.

DRAW UP THREE CLASSES OF JAP WAR CRIMINALS

Trial of Tojo Is to Begin Next Month

BY DONALD STARR
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TOKYO, Dec. 10—Trial of Ex-Prime Minister Tojo as an international criminal charged with planning, preparing, and initiating a war of aggression in violation of treaties and agreements is expected to begin in Tokyo next month, it was learned tonight.

Final plans for the trial of the war time minister and his cabinet have not been made and no date has been set, according to Joseph B. Keenan, chief counsel for the prosecution of Japanese who are considered "international criminals." Keenan, who arrived only a few days ago from Washington, D. C., is still busy with conferences to acquaint himself with the situation here.

Three Classifications

Col. Alva Carpenter, chief counsel of Gen. MacArthur's war crimes board legal section and former Fort Wayne, Ind., attorney, said that the war criminals are being placed in three classifications for purposes of investigation and prosecution, a circumstance which has led to some confusion among the principals themselves.

Class 1 is confined to international criminals and includes statesmen, industrialists, army and navy leaders who planned a "war of aggression," primarily those acts preceding the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The investigation and prosecution of this group will be under the direction of Keenan.

Class 2, which will be handled by Col. Carpenter along with class 3, includes those generals, admirals, and other military leaders who were responsible for the conduct of armies and military units and who, either thru orders or tacit approval, caused cruelties to be performed upon allied troops or civilians in violation of defined laws of war.

Registry of Suspects

Class 3 is a category devoted to the investigation and trial of the actual perpetrators of such crimes as killing, starving, rape, and burning and sacking. Col. Carpenter is further charged with maintaining a central registry of all suspected war criminals in all categories. He must furnish information to all allied powers upon request.

The next big trial under Col. Carpenter's jurisdiction will be that of Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma, former commander of the Japanese armies in the Philippines, in Manila. Formal charges have been sent to Manila and the trial is expected to begin in about two weeks, after Homma's counsel has had an opportunity to prepare his answer.

He is specifically charged with the murderous "death march of Bataan" and scores of other atrocities against Americans and Filipinos.

HIDDEN JAPS ON GUAM KILL 3 OF MARINE PATROL

HONOLULU, T. H., Dec. 10 (AP)—Japanese, who knew their country had surrendered, killed three marines and wounded another in an ambush on Guam Saturday, marine headquarters said today. The four were not identified.

The quartet was on a patrol investigating gunfire and reported disturbances by skulking Japanese soldiers in the Guam jungles. The marine who escaped crawled to a native village, from which he was taken to a hospital, the dispatch said.

Four 25-man patrols sent out with native guides found the victims lying side by side in a gully, robbed of weapons and partially stripped of clothing. Reconnaissance patrols are searching for the Japanese.

Communist Army Strikes Rail Town

13 Day Action

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 10 (AP)—An attack by 120,000 Chinese Communists on the strategic railway town of Lincheng in southern Shantung province was reported today in a Central government dispatch which said the outnumbered defenders were "fighting bravely" and still holding on.

Lincheng is on the Tientsin-Pukow railroad 50 miles north of Hsuchow. The dispatch asserted hostilities had been in progress there for 13 days.

The China Times reported the government was considering terms offered by Gen. Chang Hsueh-shih for the surrender of his forces in Manchuria, and that a final decision would be made after the return to Manchuria of Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of central government forces there. Tu was scheduled to leave Chungking today.

WAUKEGAN HIGH SCHOOL CLOSED BY INFLUENZA

Because influenza caused 519 absences from an enrollment of 2,892, Waukegan Township High school was ordered closed for two days yesterday by Dr. J. Lloyd Trump, superintendent.

This action was recommended by Dr. Erich Weis, school physician. The basketball game with the Paris, Edgar county, High school, scheduled for tonight, was canceled.

All Waukegan grade schools were open yesterday, with absences reported at 15 per cent. William C. Petty, Lake county superintendent, said all county schools were open, altho seven had been closed last week.

SIX U. S. PLANES MISSING IN SHOW OVER NO. CHINA

PEIPING, China, Dec. 10 (AP)—A show of force by American marine air power over strife torn areas of north China may have cost the United States at least 12 lives. Six dive bombers are unreported and have been overdue more than 48 hours, it was learned today.

The planes, each a late version of the Curtiss Helldiver and each carrying at least two men, left their base at Isingtao Saturday. They were scheduled to rendezvous over Taku, river mouth port for Tientsin, then sweep in formation up the river and return.

Altho no report had been received on the whereabouts of the missing planes, it was believed they had been forced down by bad weather. One pilot said a transport plane flying in the area shortly after the marine show reported winds up to 93 miles an hour.

4 Millionth Soldier Gets His Discharge from Army

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—The four millionth soldier has been released from the army. The war department said today that figure was reached yesterday and meant that 48 per cent of those in the army on V-E day have been discharged. The half way mark will be reached this week.

It's time to trade in your brain for a New 1946 Model!

With the slick, streamlined, jet-propulsioned, atom-harnessing age smack upon us, poor old mankind is still puttering along on a four-cylinder, low-octane, pre-war brain.

Really, it's time to trade in that brain for a new 1946 model. It's time to catch up to and keep pace with science, to make it your servant, to get the good and fun out of science it holds for us all.

It will be possible to do that, beginning April 1, 1946. It will be not only possible, but enticing and exciting. For, on April 1, 1946 . . .

. . . there will appear the first issue of a brand new magazine, of a new kind of magazine, of a most needed magazine. On April 1, 1946, there will appear the first issue of SCIENCE ILLUSTRATED.

SCIENCE ILLUSTRATED will bring science home to you. It will translate science into terms of living. It will tell you—graphically, pictorially, authentically . . . in a way you can understand and have fun reading—what is going on in the world of science.

It will tell you what science is up to to let you live longer and have a lot more fun while you are doing it.

It will tell you what science is doing to enable you to squeeze a couple of extra hours out of the standard twenty-four-hour day.

It will tell you how science can make your meals better and easier to prepare.

It will tell you how science is sticking its test-tubes and microscopes into women's fashions. It will help you lead a fuller life, a richer life, a life of wiser decisions. It will excite you as few other magazines have, and enlighten you as no other magazine has.

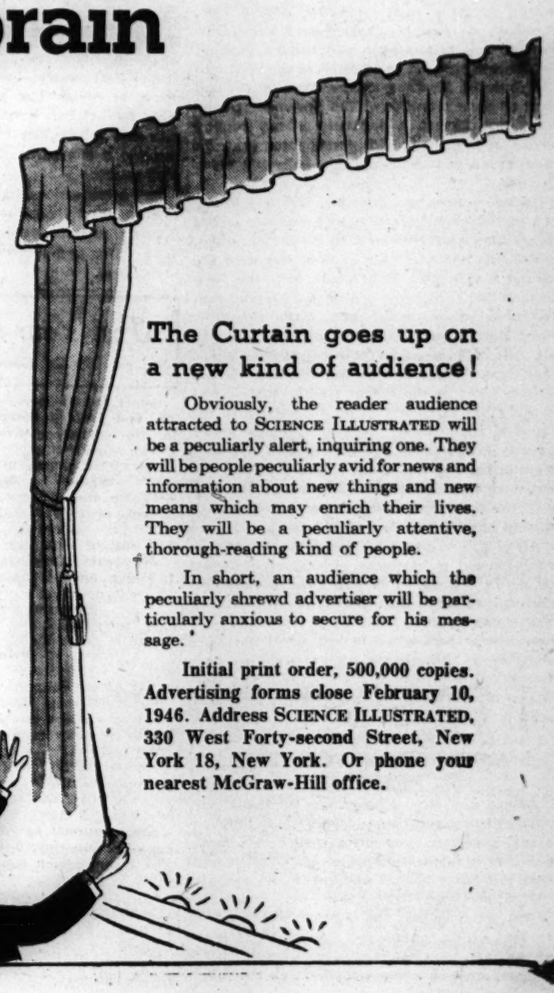
And when we say "YOU," we mean you the intelligent American citizen who recognizes the advantage and exhilaration of keeping aware of the forces shaping tomorrow's world.

Be sure to get the first issue of SCIENCE ILLUSTRATED, on newsstands in April. Twenty-five cents.



The Curtain goes up on a new kind of audience!

Obviously, the reader audience attracted to SCIENCE ILLUSTRATED will be a peculiarly alert, inquiring one. They will be people peculiarly avid for news and information about new things and new means which may enrich their lives. They will be a peculiarly attentive, thorough-reading kind of people.

In short, an audience which the peculiarly shrewd advertiser will be particularly anxious to secure for his message.

Initial print order, 500,000 copies. Advertising forms close February 10, 1946. Address SCIENCE ILLUSTRATED, 330 West Forty-second Street, New York 18, New York. Or phone your nearest McGraw-Hill office.

A CONSPIRACY TO TURN BLACK INTO WHITE

The similar tenor of several apologetic editorials which have appeared almost simultaneously in newspapers in different parts of the country suggests a common interest and a common direction toward the end of stifling the Pearl Harbor investigation. A common direction can only mean New Deal direction. In addition to the White House conspiracy of 1941 to put the United States at war, a collateral conspiracy has developed to suppress the evidence of the original cabal.

The apologist press is deliberately trying to convert an objective search for the facts and the truth about Pearl Harbor into a name calling row in order to befog the issues. For four years the Hawaiian commanders, Adm. Kimmel and Gen. Short, have been forced to labor under the charge of dereliction of duty, with no opportunity to vindicate themselves. Their responsibility can only be determined by full disclosure of all facts. That is the purpose of the investigation.

The New Deal newspapers which have set up a diversionary clamor are endeavoring to deny Kimmel and Short a square deal. The American sense of fair play is not going to let them get away with it. The facts of Pearl Harbor have already been marshaled so fully that the conspiracy is committed to failure.

The primary fact is that Mr. Roosevelt, weeks and even months before his Boston speech of Oct. 30, 1940, pledging parents "again and again and again" that their sons were not going to be sent into foreign wars, had determined to take the United States into war.

Adm. J. O. Richardson, former commander in chief of the United States fleet, testified that three weeks before that speech Mr. Roosevelt told him that the Japanese "could not always avoid making mistakes and that, as the war continued and the area of operations expanded, sooner or later they would make a mistake and we would enter the war." There was the intention. The same motive was to appear again and again—that we would go to war, but that the Japs must be permitted to make the mistake which would constitute the first overt act.

This policy was stated in so many words in the message drafted under Chief of Staff Marshall's signature and dispatched to Gen. Short Nov. 27, 1941, by Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. Gerow, chief of war plans. "If hostilities cannot be avoided," this dispatch stated, "the United States desires that Japan commit the first overt act."

Gen. Gerow has testified that the United States and Britain had completed their joint war plans by early in 1941, months before the Pearl Harbor attack. Joint staff conferences were being held almost continuously thru the year. In an undated memorandum to President Roosevelt, written in the summer of 1941, Gen. Marshall definitely envisioned our entering the war beside Britain in Europe. "Britain is reaching the limit of usable man power," Marshall said. "We must supplement her forces. Germany cannot be defeated by supply of munitions to friendly powers and air and naval operations alone. Large ground forces will be required."

Thus it was already assumed long before Pearl Harbor that we would inevitably go to war with Germany. At the same time we had committed ourselves to assist Britain in the event of an attack by Japan. Another of Gen. Marshall's memoranda forecast American operations in the mid-Pacific and far east "should Japan enter the war."

How far these commitments to the British extended, and to how large a degree they were a secret of the White House clique, is indicated in a message sent to the chief of naval operations on Dec. 6, 1941, one day before Pearl Harbor, by Adm. Hart, commander of the Asiatic fleet. "Learned from Singapore," he radioed, "we have assured British armed support under three or four eventualities. Have received no corresponding instructions from you." He was answered by events a day later.

These facts establish that our course was not quite as innocent as Mr. Roosevelt would have had the country believe. If we weren't going to war, why was a war being planned?

The investigation has developed the fact that the Jap secret code was cracked somewhere around the beginning of 1941, when we passed on the decoding method to the British. Mr. Roosevelt for almost a year before Pearl Harbor was thus in almost as privileged a position as if he were sitting undetected in the Japanese war councils. He knew their every thought and most of their intentions. The pretense that he could not foresee a Japanese attack coming where and when it did, presupposes that his countrymen can be duped into believing black is white.

He knew from the fake Jap weather broadcast of "east winds rain," which was the agreed signal between Tokyo and its diplomatic corps, that Japan had decreed a state of war with the United States from Dec. 4 on. Now the New Dealers and their press spokesmen pretend that the message was never sent, altho the army Pearl Harbor board recorded in findings, which are still suppressed for political reasons alone, that Capt. Safford of naval intelligence testified that it went to the White House; that it was gathered up early in 1942 for submission to the Roberts commission; that file copies subsequently disappeared, and that logs of the navy monitoring stations which intercepted the signal were later destroyed. Apparently the only way the New Deal could collect any insurance was to have a fire. It's an old trick.

All of this evidence is conclusive. It can't be conjured out of existence by abusive editorials by the kept press, or by New Deal lies and concealment to throw dust in the eyes of the investigators and public. The conspiracy of the apologist newspapers will fail, just as all the other conspiracies centering about Pearl Harbor have failed, and the truth will be known to the families of all the dead whom Roosevelt plotted to send into war.

A VICTORY FOR THE PEE-PUL

Before the war France was virtually self-sufficient in its coal supply, and at one time was a coal exporter. The allied rush across northern France in the summer of 1944 was so swift that the Nazis had no opportunity to sabotage the mines before they retreated. Since the defeat of Germany the French have had included in their control area the important mines of the Saar. The country, in addition to its own miners, most of whom were kept on the job by the Germans, has hundreds of thousands of German slave laborers at its command and a considerable number of Polish miners who were brought into France during the Nazi regime and are still there as displaced persons.

France has enough coal mines, enough man power, and enough equipment not only to take care of itself but to aid some of its less fortunate neighbors. It is doing neither. It is getting coal from America, but in spite of this its industries are on a three day schedule and its people are freezing for lack of coal.

Electric current is being shut off five hours during the day time in Paris. The subway is shutting down an hour earlier. The supply of electric power depends, of course, on coal for the power plants. Householders are rationed to a quarter of a ton each and coal is selling on the black market at $240 a ton.

The answer to this anomaly is that the coal mines of France were the first industry in the nation to feel the dead hand of nationalization. The De Gaulle government nationalized the mines in the important northern producing departments of Pas de Calais and Nord in September, 1944. The burocrats have had 15 months in which to produce results. The results are that the pee-pul own the coal mines, and the pee-pul are freezing.

WISHY-WASHY WON'T WIN

The strong speeches by Gov. Green and Sen. Hart of Connecticut do not relieve the bad impression made by the Republican national committee at its meeting in Chicago, because the committee failed to follow its courageous leadership of the Illinois governor and the retired admiral.

The committee took a wishy-washy stand by indorsing the wishy-washy declaration of principles by the Republican delegation in congress. There were reasons for this congressional declaration which may have seemed compelling to the representatives and the senators who will be seeking reelection next year, but those reasons should not have been compelling to the national policymaking body of the party, nor will they seem compelling to the Republicans of the nation. The congressional statement was designed to offend no one, with the result that it pleases no one. All the congressmen managed to tell the nation was that they were for everything good and nothing bad, without specifications or details, and that they can do things better than the Democrats. That sort of language doesn't win an election.

It was easy to surmise what went on in the meetings that drafted the declaration. Every congressman and senator was anxious not to antagonize any influential group in his own district or state. In consequence every statement evidencing meaning or courage was deleted and nothing but meaningless pap remained. In accepting the congressional statement the national committee adopted the timidity of the congressmen and senators without even the excuse of personal interest that the latter had for their action.

Particularly bad was the committee's failure to denounce the British massacres of the Javanese. The explanation of this omission would seem to be that the committee's Wall Street control expects to be cut in on the blood money of the colonial exploitation.

Similarly, a declaration on foreign policy which tacitly accepts the rape of Poland and the Baltic countries while pledging to fulfill "to the greatest possible degree" our guarantees of freedom to small nations is hypocrisy and nothing but hypocrisy.

The only recognition of the bankruptcy of the party's declaration was the decision to appoint a special committee to make further declarations of policy. The appointments to the committee will be made by Gov. Dewey's and Wall Street's man, National Chairman Brownell.

It was intimated in this connection that the party is not content to stand on static principles, but will continue to produce dynamic and up-to-the-minute principles. Mr. Brownell should make the acquaintance of the Sam Goldwyn among Chicago editors, who once addressed his staff, saying, "The boss says there are too many old platitudes in the paper. I want you to get some fresh platitudes."

A LIVING WAGE

That the New Deal-CIO program of prosperity thru slogan is making converts was attested the other day when the state unemployment compensation division lost patience with a client, Edwin C. Damnitz. Mr. Damnitz was fined $200 for causing a disturbance in the compensation division's office. He started to break up the furniture because compensation had been stopped when he refused to accept a number of tenders of jobs.

The interesting fact is that the jobs paid from $1.50 to $1.75 an hour. Even during the war production boom, $60 to $70 a week, with the possibility of more thru overtime, was not a wage to sneeze at. The post-war economic gospel that wages should have no relation to prices or the pool of available workers in the labor market has, however, convinced Mr. Damnitz and others like him that they are being insulted if offered anything less than premium-plus wages.

The labor unions have peddled their dogma to such effect that it is going to be difficult for industry to reconvert unless the minds of workers are first reconverted to something like common sense.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office

JOHANN ORTH, R. I. P.

The old story of Johann Orth, the missing Hapsburg, has turned up again, in Norway for a change, and this column is pleased to read that the documents have been ruled authentic by a probate court. When we were a reporter, Johann used to appear in this country about once a year, generally in Wisconsin or Minnesota, also with documents or heirlooms that proved his authenticity, and much newspaper space would be wasted until he was exposed as an imposter of the crackpot type. In the first decade of this century, the story was a hardy annual in which editors rejoiced as a happy sequel to rumors about American descendants of the Lost Dauphin.

We are content to let Norway have the certified heirs of this scion of a vanished empire. Since Johann Orth now rests in peace under the tombstone of a certain Hugo Koehler in Christiansand, the rising generation of American reporters will never have to rewrite the old tale from crumbling clippings, like their forerunners. American pretenders will be compelled to hitch their impostures to myths less faded, perhaps associated with alleged offspring of Hitler such as the child nicknamed "Uschi," shown in domestic snapshots of the fuehrer and his lady friend.

As the tale comes from Norway, two heirs of the aforesaid Hugo Koehler feel that they are entitled to the allegiance of Hapsburg monarchists. They would do well to glance at the family tree. Grand Duke Johann Nepomuk Salvator of Hapsburg and Tuscany, who called himself Johann Orth when he ran away to sea, was the youngest son of his imperial sideline. Two of his elder brothers married and begat. Among their grandchildren were five males: Rainer Joseph, b. 1895; Leopold, b. 1897; Antony, b. 1901; Francis Joseph, b. 1905; and Charles, b. 1909. Some of these surely survive, and altho they are more legitimate pretenders than their Norwegian cousins, they have made no grabs for the phantom crown.

Luxemburg in Chicago

Out in Rogers Park, we live where the Luxemburg gardeners settled long before Chicago grew up. When we walk south on Damen from Pratt av., we can always tell which of our neighbors are descendants of the old settlers, because their lawns and gardens look combed and brushed, and their flowers and shrubs seem as if every leaf and flower had been washed by hand.

Then we turn east on Devon av. and pass St. Henry's church and the Angel Guardian Orphanage, built on the site of the first Luxemburger church. We can see thru the iron fence the old graveyard where their ancestors are buried, perhaps the only church graveyard now within the city limits.

On Ridge av., just north of Devon, is the Luxemburger headquarters in a building that must be close to 100 years old. Close to it stands the Streicher farmhouse, described in books on old Chicago homes. Then we can stop for Sunday dinner at the Ridge inn, which has passed its 100th anniversary.

Best of all, we like to attend the Schobermesse festival, the great event of the year for the Luxemburg colony: Prizes for garden produce, athletic games, and in particular, good things to eat.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions by service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

W. H. C. writes: "A radio quiz program recently implied that in the army there is no such rank as sergeant major. We have recently received an address change for a home town boy which lists him as sergeant major in a headquarters company. He has a San Francisco APO number. We also have been told by a sergeant stationed in China that he expects to be promoted to sergeant major. Both are office men. One is in finance and the other in personnel. Is there such a rank?"

The army discontinued use of the title sergeant major several years ago. The new designation is master sergeant. The marine corps still uses the sergeant major title, and it is probable that the men to whom you refer are in the marine corps. The marine corps sergeant major and the army master sergeant are equal in rank and in the first pay grade. They receive $138 a month base pay. Army and marine first sergeants also are in the first pay grade, as are marine master gunnery sergeants, master technical sergeants, and quartermaster and paymaster sergeants.

Mrs. L. B. asks: "Can you tell me when the army will start releasing two year service men? My husband and I were married before December, 1941. He has been in service for 25 months, 16 of which have been in France. Inasmuch as he is a limited service man he has accumulated only 41 points."

The war department has not announced a definite date for the beginning of release of men with two years' service. As of Dec. 1, enlisted men are required to have 55 points for discharge. Estimates have been made that the critical score would be so low by March that the point system would be abandoned and two years of service would be the deciding factor.

WINTER SPORTS ARE FUN AND HEALTHFUL

THE dread of winter probably dates back to the days when transportation was poor, work was limited, and the nights were long and dreary. Heating the home was a problem and the food supply depended chiefly on the stocks at hand. Indeed the season was regarded as a period of hibernation.

But times have changed, and now we are beginning to have a different outlook on winter and appreciate its many advantages. We realize more than ever how valuable exercise and fresh air are in promoting health, and in order to derive their benefits, there should be no interruption in observing this rule. Somehow the crisp, cold breeze is invigorating. It stimulates the appetite and imparts a sense of well being. In fact, it is a feeling that no other time of year affords.

Athletic activity plays an important part in building resistance. Winter sports are not only healthful but fast and exciting. Those who desire "red-blooded" vigor select tobogganing and skiing. The actual sliding or jumping is only part of the game, for the majority must hike and climb to reach their destination. This is of value in keeping up muscle tone. These thrills are not without danger, for sprains and minor fractures are encountered. Skiing parties particularly must anticipate trouble and additional equipment should be on hand for those who might be injured.

Skating is milder and can be enjoyed by almost every one. In the city, if lagoons and lakes are not available, vacant lots can be flooded. Rinks, too, are popular. Fortunately, these can be kept open thruout the year and can be installed in warm climates, thus making this form of play available to all.

Then there is that unique type of sport which requires no skill or special equipment. Slipping on ice is universal. One joins in this recreation voluntarily or involuntarily. In the latter, it provides fun and entertainment to bystanders, altho the participant tries to conceal his embarrassment by arising nonchalantly. But sliding cannot be considered the perfect game, for all too often bone fractures result. If pedestrians would be more alert, the number of mishaps at the end of the year would be minimized.

We must not overlook walking. For those whose business duties keep them indoors, a brisk hike in the open air is exhilarating. Instead of riding to your destination, plan to walk at least part of the way.

Needless to say, the amount of exertion and open air depends upon the physical stamina and age of the individual. Those who suffer with heart or lung ailments, as well as circulatory disturbances, find frigid weather and its strong winds a real handicap. Oldsters likewise may be uncomfortable and find difficulty in withstanding freezing temperatures. In these circumstances, if it can be arranged, migration to a warm climate is indicated to obtain the comforts of nature.

CRY PERIOD

Mrs. H. M. writes: Is there any danger in allowing a 1 year old child to cry for 20 minutes every night before he goes to sleep?

REPLY

There is no harm, but it might be prevented by making sure [1] that the baby is getting enough to eat, and [2] that excitement is minimized before bedtime. A recent study showed that children in a nursery cried an average of two hours in a 24 hour period.

INTERNAL SECRETION

K. W. writes: Will you please define a hormone?

REPLY

This term refers to a secretion which is given off by one organ to excite or facilitate the function of another. In general, these products are absorbed directly into the blood stream and reach their destination thru this medium. Examples are the output of the thyroid, the pituitary, and the gonads.

NOT ADRIFT

L. R. writes: Is there really such a thing as a floating rib?

REPLY

The last two sets are frequently given this name as they are not attached to the breastbone in front. The structures are, however, anchored to the spine so that they won't float away.

NO DANGER

H. T. writes: Is the wearing of an abdominal support detrimental in any way?

REPLY

Not if it is well fitted. Nor is it beneficial if not needed.

Christmas Candle

A lighted candle on a tree
Is living flame for all to see,
A beacon lamp for every age
Illumining the written page.
The candle holds with valiant might
The spark from an Olympus height.
The glow is one with fiery strands
Gleaned from the star in far-off lands
Where shepherds wondered at the sight
Of golden brilliance in the night . . .
And here the flame for all to see—
A lighted candle on a tree.

Christmas Scene, 1945

One of our spies, completely broken down by bucking the Christmas shopping crowds, flopped onto a bench in a department store waiting room the other day. For a while she neither heard nor saw any one, anything. Then, as her daze gradually lifted, she noticed that she was sitting beside a woman with a little girl about 5 years old. The mother was patiently reading aloud from "The Night Before Christmas," which she apparently had just bought.

The child didn't give a hoot about any of it. She made that plain. She twitched and jumped and gave what seemed to be her undivided attention to the mobs thronging around. Then, suddenly, she sat up in eager attention. The mother had just droned thru the lines:

He spoke not a word,
But went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings,
Then turned with a jerk

"Show me the picture of the jerk!" the child demanded. "Is it a boy jerk or a girl jerk?"

This Changing Co-Prosperity

Lt. Comdr. Blair Walliser of the coast guard reports from the Sasebo, Japan, branch of the Greater Asia Co-prosperity league, that the picturesque Japanese countryside is dotted with tiny plots of ground under cultivation. Presumably the Japs call them Defeat gardens. . . . American soldiers occupying Japan carry Kodaks, Leica, Argus, and Brownie cameras wherever they go. The Japs call them Kamerakazes. . . . The conventional greeting from Japanese children when the Americans first arrived was "Konnichi Wa"—good day—offered with a polite bow. The natural American rejoinder was "Hiya." The Japs mistook this for a phrase of their own, so their standard greeting now, at any time of the day, in deference to so curious American taste is "Ohayo" [pronounced Ohio]. This means, "It is respectfully early, isn't it?"

Businessman

The most fascinating bit of stationery to come this way in some time bore beneath the writer's name his profession: "Peace gadgets inventor." Anything to do with the atomic bomb, say?

More on the Scot

Remember the story here recently about Alex Nicol, the long dour Scot guide at Mason Lake? It recalled to a woodswoman, who hides under the pseudonym of Mrs. Dale, the earlier days at Mason Lake when the only transportation from railroad to camp was by lumber wagon over a 22 mile logging road. Alex, who is regarded as a latter day John Bunyan, had seven league boots, she claims. One day about half way out from camp he came walking up to her party on his way to town. They invited him to get in and ride. "No," he replied. "I'm in a hurry." As a greenhorn learning to cast, she was never given any helpful suggestions by Alex until the time she overshot and her bait dangled in a tree. Then he remarked dryly, "The fish are in the vater."

Query

In the mail: "For generations it has been a tradition in our New England family of English descent to 'key' their mince pies. The imprint of a key is made on the outer edge of the upper crust. Do you know the origin of this custom?"

No. Does any one else?

Overheard

WE ALWAYS LOSE IN THE END

Chicago, Dec. 2—The United States has fought many useless wars and even tho victory was ours, in time the gain was lost by a stupid later generation.

The patriots who fought and died in the Revolutionary war sacrificed in vain. In the last 26 years we have fought two wars to save the British empire and even at this writing, our troops are stationed all over the world protecting English possessions. Since 1914 we have "loaned" Britain billions of dollars, given American lives, supplies, food, etc., in such stupendous amounts as to dwarf any taxation she could have extracted from us as a colony.

The War of 1812 was recently nullified. In the peace time year of 1940, on the inland body of water, Lake Michigan, the sailors of a neutral nation were seized by the agents of warring Great Britain and transported to prison in Canada. We fought England for unlawful impressment of seamen in 1812, but the present generation encouraged the same disgraceful procedure. And the heroes of 1812 died for what?

Then we remember the Civil war—a mighty humanitarian affair primarily to free black slaves. However, at this moment, our nation is involved in slave trade of stupendous proportions with millions of white men being bartered out to Russia and France as slave labor. I am sure if these white slaves were given a choice, they would joyously accept the alternative of picking cotton and working on plantations of our southland. Shades of Abe Lincoln and Gen. Grant!

Does one wonder why early American history is being merely "skimmed over" in the public schools today?

THE WORD MARATHON

EUROPE, Nov. 20—1946 looms as the year that will find a lot of new faces in congress unless those now responsible for muddled demobilization, labor and management strife, and loopholes in American security do something besides talk about these problems.

The American soldier is fed up with the marathon of words coming out of Washington. Unless action is immediately forthcoming, we are certain to make some changes of our own via 11 million votes. Our job is finished. We ask Washington: When are you going to finish yours?

PVT. BRUCE H. BORREGAARD

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY

Chicago, Dec. 7—"I hate wah," and while I meditate over the terrible disaster which occurred four years ago today at Pearl Harbor, there comes to my mind again, and again, and again, the Scripture:

"The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart; his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords." Psalm 55:21. A. J. A.

BACKING BRITISH SOCIALISM

Chicago, Dec. 7—Is it possible that we have been buying bonds so that England, with the 4 billion dollar loan, can make a success of the form of government that is opposed to the method that makes it possible for us to buy these bonds. FRANCIS X. O'MALLEY

CATSPAW OF BRITAIN

Chicago, Dec. 5—Strange how British interests have been at the bottom of the most bloody episodes of American history. They were mixed up in the massacre of white settlers at Fort Dearborn, part of a plan to prevent American expansion to the northwest, of which Fort Dearborn was the outpost.

They used Indians for that bloody deed. Women and children were massacred, but Britain could say to each of them: "Thou canst not say I did it."

And they played their sneaking part in the war to divide our nation in Lincoln's time, the most savage in history, culminating in the assassination of the President.

To perpetrate the Pearl Harbor massacre, the Japanese came in handy. How beastly clever the Briton can be when he evades the consequences, of his guilty acts. To each American son who died at Pearl Harbor, he can truthfully intone: "Thou canst not say I did it: never shake thy gory locks at me."

What did Churchill say? "This is what I worked for, prayed for." How naive we Americans are. O. R. W.

30 MINUTE WARS

Chicago, Nov. 30—Permanent conscription is supposed to be desirable in order to "repel any sudden attack," according to the President. But Gen. Marshall said in his report that it would take a year to mobilize four million men, even if they had already been trained by peace time conscription. Gen. Arnold says that New York, San Francisco, Detroit, etc., "may be subject to annihilation from other continents in a matter of hours." Adm. Purnell said that the next war "might last only 30 minutes."

So the militarists have knocked themselves out. They themselves admit that the un-American system of permanent conscription would be no defense against sudden attack. EDWARD C. GROSS

HIGH STEPS

Chicago, Dec. 6—I note there are to be 400 new street cars and 270 buses.

In addition to the improvements cited, has anything been done towards getting steps on these public conveyances so many persons—especially the infirm—can get aboard them?

FINE FOR NONPICKETER

Chicago, Dec. 6—I am one of the folks who was forced out of work by the G. M. strike and should like to know: If I took another job while the settlement was arranged and like it enough not to return to the old job, and if a $10 fine is charged up to me for not doing picket duty because I had new employment [1] can the fine be collected? [2] I have signed no papers that would give my consent to such a deal. The concern I worked for is an open shop. C. M.

START CENSUS OF HOMELESS IN HOUSING CRISIS

Mayor to Be Asked for More Portable Units

Tell Your Needs

Families without adequate housing are asked by the Committee on the Chicago Housing Crisis to coöperate in a census to determine the extent of the shortage. Such families are asked to write a letter stating why they need a place to live, the number, age, and sex of members of the family, housing requirements, and what rental can be paid, and mail it to the committee, room 1403, 69 W. Washington st.

A census of families who have no place to live, or whose present quarters are unbearable, was started yesterday by the Committee on the Chicago Housing Crisis.

"We haven't had anything thus far but wild guesses," said the chairman, Louis Wirth, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago. "We hope to get coöperation so we may know exactly what the situation is and whether the 4,700 temporary units promised by the government will make more than a dent."

Ask Housing Commissioner

The committee also framed a recommendation to Mayor Kelly to appoint a city commissioner of emergency housing to work with existing housing agencies while the shortage exists. Questioning whether the supply of war plant portable houses in this region will be sufficient for Chicago's needs, the committee asked the mayor to apply to the government for more units wherever they may be found.

The first 500 pre-fabricated houses allotted to Chicago will come from the shipyard at Seneca, La Salle county, and the war plant at Kingsford Heights, Ind. Work of demounting them for trucking to Chicago was started at both places yesterday.

More Money to Be Sought

More money for temporary housing will be needed beyond the 1 million dollars already loaned by the city, it was reported. Prof. Wirth said the committee would seek an additional city loan and also would inquire about the possibility of getting the use of $4,300,000 of state funds appropriated for slum clearance in Chicago.

The state housing board has denied the city's application to lump this fund with 5 million dollars of city bond money and turn it over to the Chicago housing authority for clearing three parcels of slums in Negro neighborhoods. Gov. Green has urged the use of state resources for housing veterans and for opening the way to private building.

Prof. Wirth said that rebuilding blighted areas, whether as public or private projects, will require a "decanter" in which to put displaced families while they are waiting for the new houses.

To Get Better Cough Syrup, Mix It at Home

So Easy! No Cooking. Real Saving.

To get quick relief from coughs due to colds, you should make sure by mixing your own cough syrup at home. It's no trouble at all, and you know it's pure and good. It needs no cooking, and it's so easy to make that a child could do it.

From your druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add enough plain syrup to fill up the pint. To make syrup, stir two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired. The full pint thus made should last a family a long time, and gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.

And for quick results, you've never seen its superior. It seems to take hold instantly, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritated membranes, and helping to clear the air passages.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Log of Florida Trip: Bad Food and Lodging for 1,045 Miles

BY GAIL COMPTON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 10—Florida finally has been reached after three days of weathering poor food, unpleasant sleeping accommodations, and the uncertainty of a pre-war car with synthetic tires.

To follow the stream of tourists headed for this vacation state took 76.5 gallons of gasoline costing $19.60 and $1.46 worth of oil. An additional expense was a blown out tire that had to be junked. Total mileage to Jacksonville was 1,045.9.

The trip is being made to find out what middle westerners can expect in the way of sleeping quarters and expenses if they plan to spend some of their war earned dollars on a vacation here. No previous reservations have been made anywhere and this reporter and his party will take what is available in all the well known spots in the state to find out what actual conditions exist.

Room Costs $11

So far the trip has not been too pleasant. Last night was spent in the sample room of the best hotel in Chattanooga, Tenn. The room cost $11 and the hotel's roaches held a convention in the bathroom. Lack of help seems to have resigned hotelkeepers to haphazard housekeeping which did not exist before the war. The one bright spot in town was an excellent steak dinner for $1.10.

This touring party continued to have bad luck in picking a place for lunch. A turkey sandwich and milk cost $1.25, and the bread was so stale it was inedible.

A saving grace was the highways and scenery of Georgia. Long straight stretches of good macadam passing thru red clay hills of cotton and loblolly pines resulted in easy driving for this correspondent and scenes of interest for the rest of the party. An integral part of the Georgia roadside was the innumerable places decked out with huge chenille bedspreads and bathrobes. Turning out these colorful items seems to be state industry ranking with lumber and cotton. A spread costs between $10 and $12, and a bathrobe brings $8.50.

A Tip Helps, He Learns

After being turned down at a well recommended motor court we had the luck to get rooms in one of Jacksonville's good hotels. The room clerk refused us twice until further arguments convinced him he had to find us something. The two rooms we had will cost $12 for the night.

One lesson learned so far is that a sizable tip to the proper person can accomplish the impossible.

Today the route followed was U. S. 41 from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Barnesville, Ga. There Georgia highway 7 was taken to Perry, where U. S. 431 was picked up. This was followed to Georgia highway 15 at Hazelhurst, which finally joined U. S. 1, the Dixie highway, which led into Jacksonville.

RECOVER BODIES OF FOUR MORE IN RUINS OF HOTEL

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 10 (AP)—The bodies of a Parkersburg couple and their two young sons were recovered from the wreckage of the fire swept Grand hotel here today, increasing the death toll of the blaze to five.

Firemen and police found the bodies of Edward I. Lewis, 36, a laborer; Mrs. Garnett Lewis, 35, and their two boys, 6 and 9 years old, in the debris of the fire which trapped a number of guests in the 70 year old building last night.

The other known victim was Ritchie Law of Elizabeth.

Seven of the nine persons taken to hospitals here and at Marietta, O., were injured when they were forced to jump into life nets after the flames blocked the stairway, the only exit from the 34 room hotel.

COUNTY BUDGET GOES IN TODAY; TOPS 25 MILLION

A semi-final budget for 1946, which is expected to total more than 25 million dollars, will be presented to the Cook county board today by its finance chairman, Daniel Ryan, and Deputy Controler Richard J. Daley. A public hearing is scheduled for next week.

Last year's budget called for about the same amount, but included 3.8 millions of unpaid bills. For actual operating expense in 1945, the appropriations were about 21½ millions. The nonrecurring debt figure will leave a margin for increased spending.

10% Raise for Employes

As Ryan explained this, the increase will include: a 10 per cent pay raise for 5,500 employes, 1½ millions at a guess; $800,000 for rehabilitation of county properties; $1,250,000 for election costs not incurred in 1945, and an increase in the price of supplies that may reach a half million.

Assuming that other expense will stay at the old 21½ millions, the addition of 4 millions will raise the total budget to 25½ millions. Daley said this amount could be covered by revenues, including a pegged tax levy of 16 millions.

County to Have Health Dept.

The board voted to create a public health department. It will be headed by Dr. Edward A. Piszczek, now county health officer, and will employ 58 persons. It will have $120,000 of funds from the state and federal governments and about $100,000 from the county.

This department is to function in rural areas and in any county municipalities that do not have health boards.

Allman's Budget Slashed

Members of the city council finance committee headed by Ald. Bowler [25th] told Police Commissioner Allman that they will appropriate at least $17,516,222 for patrolmen's salaries in 1946. Altho this is $1,389,222 more than appropriated for this year it falls far short of the $20,114,220 the commissioner requested as necessary if the city is to hire 1,000 extra police to man the department fully.

The committee approved a grant of $5,700 to start modernization of the department radio system.

PRESENT NOBEL PEACE PRIZE TO HULL BY PROXY

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 10 (AP)—Nobel peace prizes for 1944 and 1945 were presented by proxy today to the International Red Cross and to former United States Secretary of State Hull, who was lauded as the "father of the united nations organization."

Because Hull was unable to attend, the $30,000 prize and diploma for 1945 were accepted for him by Lithgow Osborne, United States ambassador, in simple ceremonies at the Nobel institute.

Eight Prizes Distributed

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 10—Amid pre-war pageantry the king of Sweden tonight presented eight Nobel prizes. The discoverers of penicillin, Alexander Fleming, Howard Florey, and Ernst Boris Chain, jointly received the 1945 prize of physiology and medicine. Prizes also were given to Gabriela Mistral, Chilean authoress; Johannes V. Jensen, Danish writer, and Artturi Wirtanen, Finnish scientist. Two prize winners, who had a part in the discovery of atomic energy, German born Otto Hahn and Swedish born Wolfgang Pauli, were absent.

GREEN'S SPEECH BRINGS RUMBLES OF BOOM FOR '48

Republicans Are Full of Enthusiasm for Ideas

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10—Republicans returning today from the meeting of the Republican National committee in Chicago were full of enthusiasm for the speech made by Gov. Green of Illinois when he rose to extend a welcome to the party leaders.

In fact, it wasn't long before a boom for Green for President in 1948 was burgeoning in the Republican cloak rooms. The Green speech, striking a forthright and aggressive note of conservatism as a challenge to the radical and spendthrift policies of the Truman administration was the subject of universal comment. From more than one quarter came the suggestion that Green may have made himself a Presidential candidate in a single speech as William J. Bryan did in 1896.

Among conservative Republicans, the Green speech is regarded as a far better platform for the 1946 elections than that produced by the Republican senators and representatives which Rep. Martin [Mass.], minority leader of the house, presented to the national committee. The Green speech possessed the concreteness and forcefulness essential to an effective platform and in those qualities the platform composed by the Republican members of congress was conspicuously lacking.

Conservatives Dissatisfied

The fact is that the Republican conservatives were dissatisfied with the platform that was evolved but it was the only declaration upon which it was possible to get a unanimous agreement.

"There is no gainsaying the fact that Gov. Green made himself a Presidential candidate with his Chicago speech," said Rep. Allen [R., Ill.].

"The governor took a position on the questions of the day that gives inspiration to Republican leadership and makes him a strong contender for the party nomination in 1948."

There was also a good deal of discussion of Capt. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, as a probable contender for the Republican nomination in 1948.

Dewey Fading Out

Gov. Dewey, if one may judge from the attitude of Republican leaders here, is fading out of the picture as a 1948 possibility for the nomination. The party is shot thru with dissatisfaction with his 1944 candidacy, characterized by a "me too" attitude on New Deal policies which he indorsed but promised to do better in carrying them out.

The prejudice against defeated candidates does not operate in the case of former Gov. Bricker of Ohio, for he was only Dewey's running mate last year and it was well known that he did not sympathize with the Dewey campaign tactics. Bricker looms large in the 1948 picture and will grow in political stature if he succeeds in getting himself elected to the senate next year.

Not to be overlooked also is Sen. Taft of Ohio whose great ability is being demonstrated week in and week out in exposing fallacies and other shortcomings of Truman administration policies.

OUR BIGGEST TRAVEL JOB

is ahead

...GETTING THE FIGHTING MEN HOME

DURING December about 530,000 veterans, homeward bound from overseas, will arrive on the Pacific Coast; another 490,000 will arrive on the Atlantic Coast—a total of more than a million service men returning in one month! All of them are eager to get home—all of us are eager to do what we can to help.

The railroads have one thought in mind—to give returning veterans the very best service they can with the cars and engines that are available.

This is the situation:

Three-fourths of all the sleeping car space in the country is assigned to movements of our fighting men. Coaches, too, have been taken from regular train service—more and more of them—including several hundred withdrawn from regular trains early this month.

As you know, no new passenger cars could be built during the war. Even the 1200 government troop sleepers, ordered last spring, have not been delivered because of labor difficulties.

Only a small portion of our passenger equipment is available now for necessary civilian travel, to say nothing of the added demands of the Holiday Season.

Inconveniences, discomforts and delays are unavoidable under these circumstances. No one regrets this more than the railroads. The problem is particularly acute on the Pacific Coast where nine-tenths of the returning veterans must make long journeys to reach their homes.

This then is the situation for the next two or three months. We know you understand and will be patient, just as you were during the war years. For nothing is so important to America as her fighting sons.

The returning of these men—a million a month—is the final phase of the railroads' war job. It is the most difficult. But when it is behind us, normal service will be quickly restored, and plans that already are far advanced for many improvements and innovations in railway travel will become realities.

But first we must finish our war job!

EVENING APPOINTMENTS ARRANGED

BRIDGE EXPERTS SEEM TO HAVE LITTLE FINESSE

One Makes a Little Pass; It's No Grand Slam

New York, Dec. 10 [Special]—The 19th annual national championship tournament of the American Contract Bridge league ended last night in Atlantic City, N. J., when one contestant in a wheel chair tore a button off another's coat.

This violence, it was learned here today, was the outcome of a dispute over betting, which is prohibited by tournament rules.

The Persons Involved

The principals in the fray were William E. McKenney of New York, who has been chief executive officer of the organization since 1927, and John Crawford of Philadelphia, Pa., one of the most successful of American tournament bridge players.

The last round of the championship had ended an hour before the incident occurred. Crawford said that McKenney's wife criticized him for betting in defiance of the rules. Crawford thereupon demanded an apology.

With this, McKenney, who is temporarily lame with a broken bone in his ankle, raced his wheel chair over to Crawford and seized him by the coat. The button flew off and then, McKenney said, "some others stepped in and it was all over."

Quits His Job

McKenney then resigned as executive chairman. By that time most of the members of the executive committee had left Atlantic City. Those remaining held an emergency meeting, but decided to take no action until the next full committee meeting.

McKenney, in a statement, said that during the tournament he had found a small group of players who were violating the rule against betting.

"Of course," he said, "it's a hard thing to prove, because the bets are made in the halls or hotel rooms. As the tournament ended I found out definitely that one of the players, John Crawford of Philadelphia, had placed some bets."

Suspensions in Order

McKenney said that, in the past, players found guilty of betting had been suspended. He expressed confidence that the executive committee would take action to uphold the no-betting rule which, he said, had been violated by a relatively small number of the 700 players in the tournament.

Fanciers of such things explained today that betting at bridge tournaments ordinarily is quite rare.

AMERICAN MUSIC TO BE FEATURED BY SYMPHONY

Radio Show to Include Popular Themes

BY LARRY WOLTERS

An "all American" program is to be presented by the Chicago Symphony orchestra in its concert on WCFL at 8 p. m. tomorow. The orchestra, to be directed by Desire Defauw, will not confine its selections to the classical vein. A suite from the musical show "Oklahoma" by Dick Rodgers and Robert Russell Bennett is to be included.

The program also will include Morton Gould's "American Salute," based on the old tune, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," David Guion's concert transcription of "Turkey in the Straw," Frank Bridge's arrangement of "Sally in Our Ally," Chadwick's ballade, "Tam O'Shanter," and the overture to "The School for Scandal" by Barber.

Sponsors of the Sunday Evening hour, featuring the Detroit Symphony orchestra and chorus, which is being prepared for its 400th broadcast on Dec. 16, have disclosed the compositions, artists and conductors most favored during its 10 years on the air. Its "Hit Parade": Sibelius "Finlandia," Debussy's "Festivals," Introduction to the 3d act of "Lohengrin by Wagner," Berlioz's "Rackoczy March," Strauss' "Roses of the South," and Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slav."

The guest artists: John Charles Thomas, Lawrence Tibbett, Jose Iturbi, Jascha Heifetz, Lily Pons and Gladys Swarthout. Conductors: Fritz Reiner, Eugene Ormandy, Victor Kolar, Sir Thomas Beecham, and Eugene Goossens.

Christmas seal salesmen are taking to the air this week to press their annual campaign to aid in the fight against tuberculosis. Proceeds of the drive finance activities of the Tuberculosis Institute of Chicago and Cook county. Dr. Oscar Hawkinson, one of the directors of the institute, will be heard on WAAF at 11:30 a. m. today.

Demonstration of the Sister Kenny technique of treating infantile paralysis will be telecast over television station WBKB at 7:30 tonight. William C. Eddy, director of the station, said that this program, entitled "And They Shall Walk," represents a pioneer step in the use of television for education.

HOWAT, WHO LED MINERS' FIGHT ON LEWIS, DIES

Pittsburg, Kas., Dec. 10 (AP)—Alexander Howat, 69, who as a stormy Kansas mine union leader, battled John L. Lewis' control following World War I., died here today.

Howat served as local president of the miners' union until he was ousted by Lewis in 1921 during a widespread strike in the southeastern Kansas fields. He led a fight against the former Kansas industrial court law in 1919 and served several months in Kansas jails for violating court injunctions against strikes.

In 1930 Howat moved to Illinois to become international president of a "rump" group of United Mine workers fighting Lewis' control of the union. When Illinois courts decided in favor of the Lewis faction, Howat's group disbanded.

Caption Writer's Death a Suicide, Inquest Rules

A verdict of suicide while temporarily insane was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury at an inquest into the death of Edward R. Salter, 37, a picture caption writer for the Herald-American. Salter shot himself in the head early yesterday shortly after he and his wife, Betty, returned to their home at 4723 Sheridan rd. Mrs. Salter testified that her husband, to whom she was married five months, shouted from the bedroom, "I am sorry for all the trouble I caused you." Then she heard the shot. She explained his remark by saying that he had been having trouble with his ex-wife.

REPORT HEALY TO LEASE CIVIC OPERA HOUSE

Stephen A. Healy, contractor and investor in real estate, is reported negotiating for a lease of the Civic Opera house auditorium, stage equipment, and scenery. The lease, if signed, would be for five years from March 1, 1946.

Healy's plans for the playhouse, which has 3,649 seats, were not disclosed yesterday, but rumors said he might sublease it for moving pictures.

Abner J. Stillwell, vice chairman of the Chicago Music foundation, which sold its controling interest in the building in 1943 to General Finance corporation for $266,000 and assumption of a $9,800,000 mortgage, said Healy's lease would not affect the Chicago Opera company's annual season.

Miss Appleton Will Become Bride Dec. 28

BY JUDITH CASS

THE problem of shopping for a trousseau thru the Christmas holiday rush is confronting Miss Edith-Marie Appleton, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert I. Appleton of Evanston, are announcing her engagement to Lt. Comdr. Robert B. Goodman Jr. today. The ceremony will take place at 8 p. m. Dec. 28 in the First Methodist church of Evanston, with a reception following in the Appletons' lake front home.

Miss Appleton was graduated from the Roycemore school and from Smith college. She took two and a half years of training in the Evanston hospital's school of nursing, interrupting her course when she broke her arm 10 weeks ago. Comdr. Goodman, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, is the son of Mrs. Raymond Plunkett of Wausau, Wis., and of Mr. Goodman of Marinette, Wis., and a grandnephew of the late William O. Goodman of Chicago. He now is on terminal leave from the navy, having served for nearly five years.

After an eastern wedding trip Comdr. Goodman and his bride will spend a month or so at her parents' home in Miami Beach, Fla. Mr. Appleton is in Florida now, but will return before the wedding.

Other Wedding News

The William Franklin Crum house in Hinsdale will be busy during the Christmas holidays, for the Crums' daughter, Nancy, and Lt. Camille M. Shaar Jr. of the naval reserve will be married Dec. 28. The wedding will take place at 8:30 p. m. in Grace Episcopal church, with a reception following in the Hinsdale Community house.

Miss Joan Rhinehart of New York will be Miss Crum's maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Anne Maynard of New York, Miss Joan Pendleton of Bangor, Me.; Miss Barbara Tait of Detroit, and Miss Beverly Briggs of Hinsdale. Richard Shaar will be his brother's best man, and among the ushers will be the bride's younger brother, Robert Crum. Lt. Shaar is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Shaar of Long Beach, Cal., where Dr. Shaar is head of the naval hospital. Following a wedding trip south, Lt. Shaar and his bride will go to Annapolis, where he will take a post-graduate course in engineering.

Engagement News

Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Whitacre of Winnetka announce the engagement of their daughter, Jane, to Capt. John W. Zimmerman Jr. of the army military intelligence service, son of Mrs. Zimmerman and the late Mr. Zimmerman of Lexington, Va. Miss Whitacre, a graduate of Northwestern university, recently returned from two years in Europe with the American Red Cross. She was attached to the 53d General hospital in England and landed in Normandy with the 100th Evacuation hospital, with which she served thru France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Holland, and Germany, never far behind the front lines. All personnel of the hospital unit, which was the farthest advanced medical unit with the 9th army at the time of the Rhine crossing, wear at least four battle stars.

Capt. Zimmerman also served two years in Europe, and among other decorations wears the croix de guerre with palm, the bronze star with cluster, five battle stars, and the infantry combat badge. He is a graduate of the Virginia Military institute.

On the Calendar

A number of small dinner parties will be given in Lake Forest Thursday night preceding a concert Ray Lev, young New York pianist, will give at 8:15 in the Lake Forest Day school. Mrs. James R. Addington is in charge of tickets to the event, assisted by Mrs. Edward K. Welles, Mrs. Clymer S. Bowen, and Mrs. Richard M. Delafield, with whom Miss Lev will stay.

Mr. and Mrs. John Harris Ward will give a supper party later for the artist, who made her debut in London at the age of 17. She has appeared three times with the New York Philharmonic. Maj. Addington, at home and out of service, and Mrs. Addington, the William H. Mitchells, Gen. and Mrs. Charles C. Haffner, Mr. and Mrs. Welles, and Col. and Mrs. George Voevodsky are some of those giving dinners. The school plans one or two community events each year.

To make the Christmas night opening of the Ballet Theater in the Civic Opera house a gala occasion on both sides of the footlights, members of the Mary Bartelme club, which will benefit from the opening, are hoping that members of the audience will wear evening dress. Fashions appropriate for the occasion will be shown at a fashion show and tea to be given by the club at 3 p. m. today in the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field & Co. Members of the junior auxiliaries of the Mary Bartelme club will serve as mannequins.

Following a buffet supper at 6:30

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

On Second Thought

Of all the girls that you have known,
You still preferred me for your own—
Or did you say that?

Your travels took you far and wide,
But always led you to my side—
Or did I pray that?

When you were back with me once more,
The days were perfect, as before—
Did they just seem that?

And now my life complete will be,
For you will always stay with me—
Did I just dream that?

Care & Feeding of Executives

White Collar Girls and their bosses better read "The Care & Feeding of Executives" before the post-war jitters get 'em. Because the authors, Millard C. Faught and Laurence Hammond, really romp thru the modern office in this one. And what they miss in their mad scamper thru the portals of Big Business, artist Jefferson Machamer supplies. "How to Engage a Secretary" . . . "How to Sit at a Big Desk" . . . "How to Pound a Table" . . . "How to Take a Client to Lunch"—these are all hilariously expounded. As mentioned in the foreword, "Our nerves and dispositions are on edge. Business men's ulcers have become a sort of home front Purple Heart." This may not be a bland diet, but it will help the ulcers. Published by Wormwood Press, $2.50.

Hopes Dimmed for Nylons on Christmas Tree

BY JUNE GESERICK

A woman's chances of getting a pair of nylon stockings for Christmas are slight, according to midwest hosiery manufacturers, whose estimates yesterday on the end of the nylon shortage ranged from six months to three years.

Early predictions that huge quantities of nylon hosiery would be available before Christmas were "far too optimistic," the manufacturers said. Production difficulties, chiefly the transition from the manufacture of rayon hosiery to the making of nylon hosiery, and minor labor troubles are responsible for slow mill releases, they added. They also blamed the transition to nylon for a decline in the production of rayon stockings, which were virtually unobtainable in Chicago stores yesterday.

A Fort Wayne, Ind., mill official said his company's first shipment to Chicago should arrive early next week, and an executive of an Indianapolis, Ind., mill reported that his firm may be able to make its first shipment of nylons before Christmas, but that it will be very small in comparison to the demand.

A Kenosha, Wis., hosiery company has been shipping nylons "as fast as possible" since Nov. 15, according to a company official, who added, however, that "Christmas prospects are very poor." A Minneapolis, Minn., hosiery mill executive said his company's shipments will be held until after Jan. 1, when a sufficient supply will be available to service all its dealers. On the other hand, a Milwaukee, Wis., mill reported it is shipping 250,000 pairs thruout the nation this week, with 20,000 to 25,000 pairs scheduled for Chicago.

One official explained that 1½ million pounds of nylon is available each month for hosiery manufacturers. That amount would be sufficient to make 2 million dozen pairs of nylons, he said, but such a total cannot be achieved because of production troubles.

Chicago stores also held out little hope for sufficient nylon supplies, and most of them reported a shortage, and sometimes complete lack, of rayon hosiery. One store expects to continue its release of nylons as soon as they arrive, but most department stores will have no nylon releases for the public until after Christmas. Employes explained that present supplies are so small that "it just causes customer trouble when they're put on sale." Another employe said, "It'll save furniture if we avoid a rush by waiting until after Christmas."

Stores questioned in a Tribune survey disclosed they probably will use a card system when nylons are made available to customers. One card for each pair of nylons will be doled out by hosiery department clerks to customers, who probably will be asked to make their purchases of nylons in another department in order to avoid the rush that would result if the stockings were put on the counter.

The women with the best chances for getting nylons before Christmas, according to yesterday's study, are clerks in department stores, several of which will give employes first bid on the small quantity of nylons available.

French Accept German Pianist Barred by U. S.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

WIESBADEN, Germany, Dec. 10—Walter Gieseking, top ranking German concert pianist, whose name heads the blacklist of musicians and artists forbidden to follow their former pursuits in the American zone because of his alleged coöperation with the nazi regime, still is welcomed for concerts in the French occupied area, he disclosed today. He is, in fact, booked for an appearance next Sunday at Mainz under auspices which he described vaguely as "some French-German cultural interchange—I'm not sure just what it is."

Invitations to the British zone for similar appearances reputedly have been withdrawn since authorities there learned of the ban on his activities in the American area, altho he obtained a food card at the local labor office on the ground that he was giving concerts before audiences in the British and French zones. Passes for such trips were issued to him by the German police in Wiesbaden.

Confirmation of his status with the British Rhine army has not been possible because of communication difficulties, but a British liaison officer here said he was confident it would be impossible for Gieseking to obtain permission from military authorities in the Rhine army area to enter there and that none had been obtained in the past two months.

Despite the report that he had been forced to do manual labor, Gieseking today is simply marking time at his hillside mansion in the outskirts of Wiesbaden, where he and his wife and their two daughters spend virtually all the daylight hours huddled in the small kitchen, the only room in which heat is permitted. The combination of bitter weather and fuel shortage makes it impossible for him to use the piano, he commented, so he "can do nothing at all.

"I have never been told first-hand about the blacklist," he said. "I know of it only thru others and the published list. For myself, I do nothing. I leave everything to my friends."

Altho he admittedly profited from numerous appearances inside and outside Germany during the nazi era and acknowledged to officials that he realized his fame in the musical world was utilized for propaganda purposes, neither his property nor his bank account has been touched, Gieseking said.

Christmas Season Is a Time to Foster Child's Best Traits

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Christmas provides a ready made opportunity to foster pretty nearly all the nicest and most desirable traits of character and spirit that we want our children to have. There's no need to think in large terms of unselfishness, self-denial, and industriousness, and then lecture dryly on goodness, if you want your children to develop it.

"The weeks before Christmas can be the richest and happiest in the year for both you and your children." [TRIBUNE Studio Photo]

To build character just use the simple occasions that lie at hand each hour, almost, of each day you live with your children. Then, without knowing it, they are happily trained up in the way they should go, "enjoying being good." Just take advantage of each opportunity that ordinary living provides and you'll need no outside guide. Eating, sleeping, dressing, doing errands, talking things over, helping about the house, all can be "grist that comes to your mill" if you're aware enough.

Christmas especially offers dozens of opportunities to foster in the children those qualities that we think of as character. Christmas, if the real Christmas spirit is there, may mean a growth in thought for others, in perseverance, self-control, self-denial, and in the ability to give whole heartedly.

But don't, for goodness' sake, let a moral tone creep into this time of preparation. The whole point is for children to enjoy the Christmas season, and they can enjoy doing all those things which, as a by-product, develop character. For example, if you're a child—little, middle, or teen age:

It's fun to plan what to give to the people you love.

It's a satisfaction to count over your savings which grow larger because you refrain from buying something you want for yourself.

It's a pleasure to spend hours making a present with your own hands.

You're proud to be able to keep an important secret about a surprise present.

You get a thrill out of anticipating the look of love and delight on the face of the one who receives your present.

And you have a nice, we're-on-the-same-level sort of feeling when you go into serious conferences with your grownups over plans.

The weeks before Christmas can be the richest and happiest in the year for both you and the children, if you will only use them.

Clubwomen's Department Will Have Yule Luncheon

The garden department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, continuing a practice started by Mrs. Wallace B. Combs when she was chairman during A Century of Progress exposition, will hold a Christmas luncheon at noon today in the Georgian room at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. Mrs. Frederick W. Wilmot, head of the department, will preside. Guest for the occasion will be Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman, federation president. One of Mrs. Chapman's hobbies is horticulture.

Dr. Tolley Will Address Syracuse Alumni Dinner

Dr. William Pearson Tolley, chancellor of Syracuse university, will address the Syracuse Alumni club of Chicago at a dinner in the Crystal room of the Palmer House tonight. Coach Lynn Waldorf of Northwestern university, an alumnus of Syracuse and a classmate of Chancellor Tolley, will serve as toastmaster. President Franklyn B. Snyder of Northwestern university also will be on the program.

New Hats Top Off Dreams of White Yuletide

BY REA SEEGER

One hatmaker, tuned to the times, has presented some new, all-white satin hats with which to celebrate a white Christmas. While many white winter hats have been seen around for weeks, these glistening satin charmers are as new and crisp as the first snowstorm and as pristinely fresh.

As top frosting for dark winter clothes, suits, coats, or dresses, they can't be equaled. Laddie Northbridge is the shrewd designer who presented these models in time to take the sag out of the midseason doldrums.

The hats themselves are of shimmering white satin, exquisitely made and flatteringly designed to make the most of coiffure and face. Some are high, with an extra lift of white satin and chiffon flowers, such as the cloche with huge white roses. The wider model with a softly rolled up brim has flowers all the way around the outer edge.

Smaller versions of the same model have less floral adornment, but the same breath-taking charm of unusual satin and white flowers at midwinter.

Exotic white satin millinery like this goes to the head quicker because of the alluring white contrast possible with furs and fabrics. They're sleek and distinctive and have a magic flattery for all personalities. They're romantic creations, to wear with colors, with dress parade fashions, such as metallics, brocades, satins, and jewel colored crepes, and with the many sequin spangled dresses for the holiday parties ahead. If you crave something new, different and dashing, spend your money for one of these new white show pieces.

Ruth Draper, Unique Actress, Ends Engagement of Three Distinguished Performances

When Ruth Draper plays "Three Women and Mr. Clifford," nothing short of the Boston orchestra could make me desert it midway, so it was kind of her to repeat it at last night's closing performance. Like all her sketches, it is happier in more intimate housing, but even in the wide rococo reaches of the Eighth Street theater it holds its theatrical own because Miss Draper recognizes the basic virtues of clarity and continuity of line. You may not get all the subtleties from the back row—I tried and you don't—but you do get the essentials of performance.

No matter where you sit at that extraordinary triptych, you get an amazingly valid picture of the secretary Mr. Clifford couldn't get along without, the bored woman he married, and the woman he loves. Creating them with no more aid than a few minor props, Miss Draper's voice changes, her physical structure seems to change, the very bones of her face seem to take on new moulding. Yet never once does she slip to the level of impersonation. She is creating three characters, and by allusion and implication is filling the stage with all the people they talk to or about. Hers is an extraordinary, and as far as I know, a unique gift in theater. For one thing, I never am quite sure whether I forget much of the rich detail in her sketches, or whether she just grows in them as she goes along. The secretary's section of "Three Women" seems much richer in implication than when I last saw it several seasons ago.

Stage Notes

Frank Wilson, who created the title role in "Porgy" and was last here in "Watch on the Rhine," has replaced George Randol as the father in "Anna Lucasta," while Roy Allen, also of the New York cast, has traded companies with John Proctor, who originally played the role of Stanley here. Mr. Randol is resuming his career as a singer with a Friday night recital in the Eighth Street theater. . . . Edwin Lester wires that his delayed auditions for singers will be held Friday morning at 11:30, backstage in the Civic Opera house. . . . Montreal newspapers said pleasant things about "St. Lazare's Pharmacy," of which Eddie Dowling, its producer, writes, "I felt happiness might stand dramatizing." . . . Guy Kibbee opens a two week engagement in "A Joy Forever" in the Blackstone tonight, and so far has no additional booking time even if he scores the biggest hit of the season.

Music Notes

The Chicago opera season of 1945 played to 76 per cent attendance as against 87 per cent in 1944, but the board of directors seem quite happy that Fausto Cleva has a contract for a third season, which may send him to Italy to collect singers for 1946. . . . Edward Johnson, general director of the Metropolitan, has accepted the chairmanship of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. He's a native with an LL.D. from the University of Toronto. . . . The Boston Symphony orchestra has announced the resumption next July of the Berkshire music center at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Serge Koussevitzky is director, of course, and Aaron Copland has been appointed assistant director. Among the summer's productions will be Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes." . . . Stage seats are now on sale for Albert Spalding's Sunday afternoon recital in Orchestra hall. They cost $2.40.

Inquiring Camera Girl

By Maryon Zylstra

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Eleanor M. Barrett, 6622 University av.]

THE QUESTION

What is your favorite Christmas carol and why?

WHERE ASKED

The Chicago Arena, Erie and McClurg sts.

THE ANSWERS

Beverly Osburn, competition skater, Allerton hotel—I like "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," because I think it is the prettiest melody. I used to sing it in school around the Christmas tree. The song makes me think of Wichita, Kas., too. That's where I lived when I was in school and first learned the carol.

Marianne Haller, competition skater, 2032 Eastwood av.—My favorite is "Silent Night," because it was my mother's favorite. She learned it in school and passed it on to me when I was little. I remember it and one big Christmas when I received a wonderful present—a teddy bear on wheels. I still have it.

Patrick Kazda, competition skater, 201 E. Ontario st.—I like "Silent Night" best, because I know it best. It typifies Christmas better than any other carol, I think. And it makes me think of when I sang it in school and church programs and reminds me that I won't be home for Christmas this year.

Bruce Sheffer, professional ice skater, Netherlands Plaza hotel, Cincinnati, O.—"Silent Night" seems to hold the spirit of Christmas. It makes me think of a Christmas play I participated in when I was a child in St. Paul, Minn. I think it is a familiar carol to me because my mother sang it. It just means Christmas, that's all.

Polly Wason, competition skater, Fort Sheridan—The beautiful melody and spiritual words of "O, Holy Night" make it my favorite carol. I associate it with my little girl days in Sunday school in Boston, Mass. Each Christmas I look forward to hearing it, and I always feel especially rewarded when it is played.

Seaman 1/C Frank Bartlett, North Quincy, Mass.—"Silent Night" has more of the spirit of Christmas in it, I think. I can remember it ever since I was little. And I've played it often on the pipe organ in church. I think both the melody and the words are the most beautiful of all the carols.

Mystery Film Leaves Much to Be Desired

"THE VOICE OF THE WHISTLER"

By Mae Tinée

The whistler is only a hopeful bystander in this thin mystery and, unlike the proverbial innocent one, not a thing happens to him.

Richard Dix plays a rather inarticulate millionaire who is ill and unhappy, in spite of his wealth, and hasn't a living relative or friend in the world. This sad case is ordered to take a trip on the Great Lakes and comes to our lovely city to start his voyage. However, he's stricken with some sort of attack just outside the Union station and is assisted by the most philanthropic taxicab driver I've ever seen, in or out of the movies.

Said cabbie puts him to bed, nurses him, and eventually steers him to a clinic with a be-yootiful nurse. The clinic physician forbids the lake trip and suggests the eastern sea coast for the last six months the patient will live. Off he goes, after shyly revealing the fact that he is the rich Mr. Sinclair, accompanied by cabby and nurse.

The latter has forsaken her fiance, a poor young intern, to marry Sinclair, after carefully checking the medical records to see that her new husband will keep his part of the bargain and die at the proper time, leaving her his fortune. She plans, as a wealthy widow, to marry the poor but honest young medic—but the sea air or something spoils everything by restoring Mr. Sinclair to excellent health. The discarded lover comes calling at the lighthouse which is the scene of this miracle, and the talks turn to murder, with husband describing just how a smartie can get away with it.

I won't tell you who murders who, but I will say that there are a number of large holes in the plot, and the acting leaves much to be desired.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 10—If you've ever wanted to come to Hollywood and couldn't make it, don't worry—Hollywood is coming to you, or about the most perfect facsimile of it you can imagine. For years publicists, promoters, photographers have endeavored to present our town as it really is to the world. They haven't been too successful. It remained for an artist, who as yet prefers to remain anonymous, to do the town up for travel. Impressed with the beauty and the interest of the town for itself, he set to work five years ago to duplicate it down to the smallest filling station. What a whale of a job he's done. I, being a citizen of nearly 30 years standing, was given a preview peek at it. The peek turned out to be feature length. I stood for hours marveling at the detail and accuracy of it. It has 4,200 street lights, 12,500 neon signs, 100,000 trees, 16,000 buildings—all in miniature. That ought to give you an idea of what the man has done—and why it cost nearly a half million dollars. Everything is there: The Bowl, the Brown Derby, Grauman's Chinese, the studios, the sea with waves rolling in on Malibu for all the world to see. And soon they'll be doing it, for if this project doesn't have the customers standing in line for blocks, I don't know show business. It's a miniature colossus.

A Lotta Saga for Filmdom's Sagacious

Having tried about everything else, producers are now going in for heavies, but heavies in literary history. Robert Lord, just out of the army after nearly four years, is readying the first part of John Galsworthy's "The Forsyte Saga" for the screen. Robert Nathan is scripting. If it clicks, Lord will make the rest of the tale in follow-up pictures. Not only that, but Metro has already telescoped four of Henry Handel Richardson's novels—"Felix," "Australia," "The Way Home," and "The Ultima Thule"—into a single running story for, rumor has it, Greer Garson and Gregory Peck. It'll be called "The Fortunes of Mahoney." Pandro Berman produces.

'Generosity' Leaves Jinx Jumpy

Harry Cohn's wedding gift to Jinx Falkenburg McCrary was a floosie role in a C-minus epic, which has only 15 days' shooting time. Not only that, Jinx was asked to wear some hand-me-downs formerly belonging to Marguerite Chapman, and other little gals at Columbia. Now all Jinx wants is a release from her contract. But it looks as if Mr. Cohn is going to be stubborn about it. . . . With George Murphy off to Broadway to co-star with Ethel Merman in "Annie Oakley," the town'll be minus one more top actor and personality. But it will do George good. There's nothing like getting back to the big town and discovering more friends than you left behind. . . . Damon Runyon can talk faster with his pencil than most people can with their vocal chords. When Mike Todd barged in and took over Damon's table at the Stork club, Damon promptly began writing Ann Sheridan, Steve Hannagan, Leonard Lyons and myself notes about his visitor. We read them, looked at Mike, and laughed. Mike, taking the hint, soon got so hot under the collar that he left. Greatest triumph of pencil and pad I've ever witnessed.

Stranger than Friction

When it was suggested that Carole Landis and Signe Hasso throw a fake feud as a publicity gag for "A Scandal in Paris," both gals threw up their hands in holy horror, proclaiming the love they had for one another. So the idea was discarded. Then a real feud started between the lassies, and poor publicity was caught right in the middle. . . . Kay Francis returns to Hollywood in January to co-produce and star in Monogram's "Wife Wanted." . . . Wild Bill has turned into "Sweet William." Since Bill Elliott left the range for dramatic pictures, he's now being billed as William. Well, scratch my coin, and call me "Silver." . . . Michael Arlen will be heading out our way in about a month. . . . H. B. Warner Jr., returning from the wars with a Purple Heart and cluster, is going to follow in the acting footsteps of his illustrious father.

INSTALMENT XXXII.

OBVIOUS INTERFERENCE

Avis was all tangled with the bicycle. She was going to pass out. A face bent over her, husky urgency spoke in her ear. "You! Are you much hurt?" Robin. . . . "It was the brakes. I couldn't stop. Why were you tagging behind?"

"I had a look in on Sheila," he said flatly. "Your bike was gone, and a second later I heard you on the bridge. You're a fool, trying to cycle thru here!"

"I'll sign that statement," she said shakily. "I just thought a good blow might chase away this darned head. I don't seem to have broken anything—except my bicycle. When you yelled I saw it—and that must have saved my face."

"Saw what?" he demanded.

"Why, the muddy streak, here at the bottom. Wasn't that what you were trying to warn me about? No power on earth could have kept me from doing a death-dealing skid . . . But there was this long bramble, too, that's what knocked me off. I saw—where is it now?"

He swung the lamp sideways, ran his fingers along a shadowy strand and with a grunt looped it back in the hedge. Now he was testing the brakes of her bicycle, muttering under his breath. "Your lamp's gone to pot as well," he accused. He didn't question her further except to ask dryly what she proposed doing now.

"Lick my wounds, crawl into bed."

Side by side they trudged homeward along the villainous path. Avis' head really thudded now.

Robin pushed the two bicycles into the shed, silencing Sheila's pleading whimper. Avis said, "You won't publish this idiocy of mine, will you?" He grinned at her. "No ruddy fear!" Together, like fellow-conspirators, they crept up the dark back stairs.

In her doorway he switched on the light and yawned, scowling with astonished disgust. "For once in a lifetime I feel as if I could fall asleep in my tracks."

"Me, too," she said promptly. "I'm yawning my head off, I can't think why. Toddle along, I'm going to get out my iodine, and . . . What are you staring at?"

It was the prostrate alarm clock. He crossed, picked it up, fingered it with a queer glint in his heavy eyes.

"So you've salvaged this old wreck . . . Golly, it's only nine!"

His lids were dropping. For a hopeful moment she had thought of him as a possible ally toward preventing . . . No, she would not give it a name.

"O, do go to bed," she begged, driven. "You're keeping me up, and I tell you I'm dead beat. You have been a dear," she said hastily, and shut the door on him.

Nine o'clock already! Never had she been wider awake; but how was she going to manage another flit?

Bruce and his taciturn partner, Dr. Grew, were still at their delayed meal when Inspector Headcorn walked in on them.

"You've not fed, have you, inspector? Good, we've been keeping yours hot. Let me present my colleague, Dr. Grew. Any luck with your missing bus passenger?"

To the stocky man at his side Bruce explained that while here a bit earlier the inspector had been rung up from the police station with the news that the mystery woman had finally come in. Headcorn briefly informed them of the fairly ordinary circumstances.

"Do you two doctors happen to know an R. A. M. C. officer named Wadsworth?" he asked bluntly.

Bruce and Grew exchanged surprised glances. "Wadsworth? Bruce repeated. "Certainly we know Jack Wadsworth. Decent chap. You've not by remote chance got your eye on him?"

"I understand the Mrs. Marks at Turrets is his sister."

Hard stares met the innocent statement. Bruce then remarked reticently that he had not heard of the relationship, and during a decidedly awkward pause the silent member of the firm made mumbled excuses and quitted the house. Forestalling inquiry, Bruce said shortly that his partner was not in on this deal. "What's this about, Wadsworth?"

"Only that the alleged sister spent a night in September at The Bull. I got a few minute tidbits from this, returned Mrs. Tanner, one of which put me on to a hectic scene at The Bull—"

"Between Wadsworth and Olive Marks?"—incredulously.

"Not at all. Between Agatha Trimble and one of the male visitors now domiciled at Turrets. This gentleman did not, as has been believed, go straight to Turrets on his arrival. He passed five days in Wyfforde. I'm referring to Miss Erica's friend from Bath."

Oscar Moravian! Then the dates would cover——?

"The murder? Quite. Also the stair-greasing. We can't, at this stage, deny the possibility of Moravian's having been secretly admitted to Turrets by Erica herself, can we? With you I agree that the trap would seem to have been baited for the younger sister, but we must not lose sight of the elder Miss Bolles' nightly journey to the top floor. What immediately concerns us is that Miss Trimble knew Moravian was already close at hand, that she went to The Bull and launched an excitable attack on him, determined to keep him from presenting himself at Turrets—and that on her return she was accused of theft and thrown out on her ear. I dislike pointing these things out to you, doctor, but——"

"So Moravian may be the murderer. Clearing a rival from his path?"

"His presence in the neighborhood does send the lights flickering. Erica, you think, was on the verge of executing a new will. Most certainly she and Moravian had exchanged letters. Still, we've yet a third theory to consider. What if an effort is on foot to remove both these wealthy sisters?"

"Both! In which order? Bruce demanded skeptically. "Because I'll put my shirt on Maud's having made her will. She's not the woman to neglect a duty like that."

"In the event of a double intestacy," the inspector interrupted, "the question of which sister dies first would be irrelevant. I've been tackling your friend the lawyer on the subject of inheritances, and I'm bound to admit a fact gleaned from him opens up a startling if improbable . . . Is this your partner coming in?"

Heavy steps had crossed the drawing room.

"O, hullo, Wadsworth," Bruce greeted. "Took the window way, did you? I've got company, as you see. Chief Inspector Headcorn, from Scotland Yard."

"Sorry," the major apologized. "Didn't know you had a visitor. Thought I'd drop in for a pipe, I'll just buzz along."

"Rot, Jack. The inspector is paying me a friendly call. We happen to have a link in Ladbroke—remember him, don't you, in the Prince Regent days? Take a pew."

By rights, Maj. Wadsworth said, he should be hitting the hay. "Another infernal scheme on for tomorrow. Have to be at Elm Corners at the ungodly hour of 6 a. m., rain or shine. What's that?"—to the inspector's mild inquiry. "O, no, I'm allowed to tootle along by car. I say, what's the time? Nine. At precisely 9:30, you kick me out."

Small oysters are the kind to choose for stew or a scalloped dish, but pick the big babies if french fried oysters are on your menu, and allow six to a person.

You can save fat by using only enough to cover a layer of oysters in the frying basket. Oysters must not be crowded while they fry. Drain the jumbo bivalves, dry them on paper toweling, then dig in egg and fine crushed cracker crumbs and fry in a single layer in fat heated to 365-370 degrees.

Here's something else to do to big oysters, or to small ones, for that matter. It's a simple recipe, but if you want to be fancy, you can call the dish oysters casino, for that's its name.

You start with a pint of drained oysters, arranging them in a baking dish or platter which can go into the oven. Then you sprinkle them with lemon juice and freshly ground black pepper, and scatter over them ½ cup finely minced green pepper and ½ cup finely chopped bacon. Into a hot oven, 450 degrees for 10 minutes and out to the table, where you may add salt, if you like.

Oysters heated for 3 minutes in their own liquid, then seasoned with salt, pepper, butter, and a little white wine are delicious, too. Usually they go on toast, because they're drippy.

Here's a good trick with oysters which you wish to fry in butter. Dip them into mayonnaise before coating them with egg and crumbs, and you'll eat the sauce with the oyster.

Minced Oysters on Toast
[Serves four]

1 pint small oysters, chopped fine
Salt, nutmeg, pepper
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup cream
2 eggs, slightly beaten
4 slices toast
4 sprigs parsley

Season oysters and saute for a minute in the butter. Add cream and eggs, and fold over and over until eggs are set. Serve at once on toast, and garnish with parsley.

Fluffy Oyster Stuffing for Turkey
[14-16 pound bird]

1½ pound loaf bread, cubed
1 cup melted butter
1 pint oysters, with liquor
2 teaspoons salt [more, if needed]
½ teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon sage
1½ cups chopped celery, with tops
¾ cup chopped onion
¾ cup chopped green pepper

Chop oysters, after draining and picking over. Strain liquid. Combine all ingredients, tossing lightly with a fork. If more moisture is wanted, add a small amount of broth obtained by cooking turkey giblets in water. Drippings from the turkey will add moisture to the dressing, so it is well to avoid wetting the crumbs too much, if fluffy dressing is the object.

Other oyster recipes, including the famous oysters Rockefeller, and oysters with mushrooms may be found in my booklet "How to Cook and Serve Fish and Shellfish," obtainable for 7 cents, in stamps, by mail. Address orders to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

Deviled Turkey Sandwiches
[Serves four]

1 cup medium white sauce
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
½ teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon vinegar
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
4 thick cooked turkey slices
4 slices toast

Combine white sauce, mustard, celery seed, vinegar, sauce, salt, and paprika and heat thru. Brush turkey slices with butter and broil. Place turkey on toast slices and cover with sauce.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	1 heart	Pass
1 spade	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	4 hearts	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of spades.

Today we continue to delve into the secrets of the gentle art of stealing. It is not very easy to carry on these discussions. Tribute must be paid to the gentleman who dupes his fellow citizen, but the reader with all hands in full view, is not so much inclined to applaud the efforts of the schemer as he is to look upon the victim as a "sap." It is not always easy to place oneself in the position of the person who has been called upon to make a quick decision under fire.

The bidding of North and South was strictly according to Hoyle. To those who might take issue with the opening bid of one diamond on such an emaciated trump suit, it should be pointed out that an opening bid of one spade would place the dealer in a very unenviable position if his partner responds with two hearts. West's strategy thruout the auction was unimpeachable. With two bidding opponents and a passing partner, the odds against his side being able to bid and make a game were considerable, but the outlook for a profit by way of a penalty was bright indeed. Since responder's naming of a new suit forced the opener to bid again there was no need for immediate action. If the bidding should die prematurely, appropriate action could be taken on a later round. The bidding developed in a manner far beyond West's wildest dreams and the double of four hearts was made with visions of a comfortable old age. One false step, however, deprived West of the fruits that were there to be picked.

The king of spades was opened and won by the ace. A low spade was ruffed with the nine and declarer, who was persuaded that West held two trump tricks as well as the ace of diamonds, saw a chance to make the hand if he could induce the doubler to pass one lead of trumps. He therefore led the six of hearts. West could not see any danger in passing this trick since he still held two sure tricks in hearts. Whether or not he should have done so is another matter. When the six of hearts held, declarer laid down the ace and then won the club finesse in dummy. A spade was ruffed in the closed hand and another club led. This time the king came up. The last spade was now ruffed. West was left with nothing but the two high trumps and the three diamonds. He was given the lead with a trump and forced to lead from the ace of diamonds setting up South's king. The possession of that low heart would have permitted West to use it as an exit card and wait for declarer to lead diamonds.

Music Breakfast Today

o'clock tonight in the Art Institute, members of the Society for Contemporary American Art will witness a Chinese theater act with no costumes or scenery. The act will be presented by Daniel Catton Rich, director of the Art Institute, and Frederick Sweet, associate curator of painting and sculpture, as a parody on collecting and showing an exhibit.

Christmas Notes

A Christmas custom handed down from the Middle Ages will be revived at 2 p. m. next Monday in Curtiss hall of the Fine Arts building when the Chicago Drama league presents Martin and Olga Stevens and their marionettes in "The Nativity." The program will be followed by a reception and tea in the Cordon club.

Members of the Newberry Center league will bring 250 presents for the children of the settlement house to the league's annual Christmas meeting and luncheon Friday in the Evanston home of Mrs. Roscoe Page. The center's new custodian, William Coates, will be present at the meeting. Some time before Christmas members of the league will go to the center to help decorate its Christmas tree.

There will be no shortage of Christmas turkey, fruits, and nuts for the children in the Lake Bluff orphanage, the Lydia Children's home, and the Central Baptist home, for the members of the Friends of Orphans are seeing to it that there is a plentiful supply of festive foods for the youngsters. The organization, which aids the orphanages thruout the year, will hold its Christmas meeting tomorrow in the Wilmette home of Mrs. Hayes McKinney.

Donations of toys, clothing, and foodstuffs for the Chicago Commons will be collected from members of the Winnetka Junior board of the Infant Welfare society at a meeting at 10:30 a. m. today in the Winnetka home of Mrs. William Mabie.

The members of the Evanston board of the Northwestern University settlement will meet for luncheon today in the home of Mrs. C. Fred Meyer. Miss Harriet Vittum will describe the traditional Christmas pageant and play which have been a part of the Yule program in the settlement for more than a score of years.

The Kenwood Garden club will hold a holiday meeting at 1:30 p. m. today in the home of its president, Mrs. Arnold Maremont, in Woodlawn av. Mrs. Maremont will demonstrate the making of Christmas decorations. Tea will be served.

St. Vincent's Hospital Society Opens Drive to Get New Members

At a small tea yesterday in St. Vincent's orphanage in N. La Salle st. members of the Crib society of St. Vincent's Infant and Maternity hospital launched their annual drive for new members. The society is the largest single source of income for the hospital, which was founded in 1881 and which is conducted by the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

About 5,000 pale blue pamphlets asking for contributions to continue the hospital's work were put into the mail yesterday. Joseph M. Cudahy is treasurer of the hospital.

Some of the women who received at the tea were Mrs. William A. Ryan, president of the society; Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody, first vice president; Mrs. George Fiedler, recording secretary, and Mrs. John S. Miller, corresponding secretary. An associate membership in the society costs $5, and a regular membership, $10. A contribution of $200 designates a Crib patron.

Mrs. Harry D., Chicago—To keep window casings from getting marred by frequent raising and lowering of venetian blinds, I glue pieces of felt to the bottom crosspieces of the blinds. This will help.

Mrs. Dan K., Milwaukee, Wis.—I've found out that old summer blankets which have become matted far beyond their prime, can be used as interlinings for various winter garments. And just this fall I made several socks for my youngest child from some discarded scraps of woolen material.

Alden Descendants to Have Forefathers Day Dinner Tonight

Recalling the anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims in 1620, Midwest chapter of the Alden Kindred of America will gather at 6 o'clock tonight in Huyler's restaurant at 308 S. Michigan av. for its 34th annual celebration of Forefathers' day.

Alden Kindred are all members of the Alden family descended from Priscilla and John Alden of Plymouth village, whose romance was made famous by Longfellow in his poem "The Courtship of Myles Standish." Longfellow was himself a descendant.

Miss Sophia Camenish, former professor of English at the Chicago Teachers' college, will be the guest speaker. In a piano group played by Miss Audrey Morris at the party will be selections from the works of the Chicago composer, John Alden Carpenter, whose family lineage is traced to the Aldens. The local group of Alden Kindred was organized in 1912.

Musicians' Club to Have Its Pre-Christmas Concert

The Musicians' Club of Women will gather for a pre-Christmas concert and party at 8:30 o'clock tonight in Curtiss hall. Participating in the program will be Paula Zwane, soprano; Charlene Dillig Brewer, violinist, and the club's lyric ensemble, with Helen Leefet directing. Julia La Vine and Mrs. William Barness will be the accompanists. Mrs. Albert Tew and Mrs. John Hattsteadt, hostesses for the evening, will have the refreshments table ornamented with holiday decorations.

Fast Stepper Helps Unravel Travel Snarls

BY SHEILA DALY

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Even tho the war is over, the transportation system just isn't what it used to be, and some persons have almost resorted to the old gray mare in their desperation. And in cities, especially during the rush hour, the buses and street cars are much like field day at a sardine cannery.

on the SOLID side

It isn't the most pleasant thing to ride during the crush hours, but there are a few transportation etiquet rules that can make things a little simpler:

When the vehicle stops and the conductor shouts "All aboard that's going aboard," do just that, and quickly, too. There's no need to tread on the heels of those in front of you, but move as fast as you can if you want to hasten the bus or street car on its way. On buses where the operator also is in charge of collecting your nickels and dimes, try to have the exact fare ready or, failing that, do have a small denomination coin on hand. It's a talented operator who can issue transfers, make change, and maneuver his heavy bus thru heavier traffic all at the same time.

And after you've handed over your fee for the ride and collected your transfer, step lively. If there are others behind you, they'll appreciate your speed. And even if you're the last one on, move out of the driver's line of vision, so that he has a clear view of the road to his right.

When you sit down [presuming, of course, that you're lucky enough to get a seat], do it gently. Brace yourself by the back of the seat in front of you, so that a sudden lurch doesn't send you piling into your seat partner's lap. It would be just your luck if she were a housewife going home with a load of eggs! But more likely you'll be standing. And doing that on a crowded bus or street car takes the grace of a Gene Kelly combined with the vine-swinging tactics of a junior grade Tarzan.

Plant your feet firmly, slightly apart if possible, grab firm hold of a strap or pole, and hang on. Except on extremely rough rides, there's no need for the swing and sway technique, giving the seated passengers that "heavy, heavy hangs over my head" feeling as you swoop low over their derbies.

Spot your stop a block or two ahead and start moving toward the door, instead of making a mad sprint for the exit when the stop is made. That "out, please" routine and a sudden spring for the door from behind three layers of passengers never makes you a favorite person. And once safely off, your troubles are over—till it's time to go home again!

Thru the Looking Glass

Shopping life, we find, is pretty much beer and skittles in the toiletries sections. There, merchandise is abundant, prices are stable, and quality is just what it used to be. Packaging may not be. You may not find metal containers, yards of satin, or clouds of cellophane on everything as you did before the war when you went on your holiday hunt, but the basic buy of merchandise, in quantity and quality, is just about the same. And even with the war shortages the packages are surprisingly gala.

There is, for instance, the handsome duo of heavily fragrances dusting powder and very lush toilet water one of the great beauty houses offers. This is an extremely "dressy" and dramatic kind of fragrance, the type of scent a woman wears for the red letter social occasion, when she whips out the best she owns in the way of wardrobe and the most winning in the way of manner.

The toilet water, lastingly and beautifully perfumed, is sheer joy to wear—and, in its gay dress, to own. The simple, modernistic bottle is fluted to resemble a half drawn theater curtain; the outer box is in a royal red.

The dusting powder, with a good puff and a big one, is boxed in the same colors. It's a regal dressing table ornament and, when you get a snuff of the contents, a builder-upper of the delectable sense of glamor. Prices: Toilet water, $3.50; powder, $2.00.

Over 6,000 Readers Ask for Recipes After Seeing Cooky Picture

More than 6,000 Tribune readers wrote last week for copies of Mary Meade's Christmas cooky recipes. This deluge of mail was inspired by the appearance Nov. 30 of a Tribune studio photograph of a platterful of holiday cookies prepared by Miss Meade's cooking staff. Russian tea cakes, walnut slices, toffee squares, date bars, spritz cookies, brownies, and Scandinavian cookies are included in the set. Any interested reader may obtain the recipes by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Mary Meade, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

PRESTO CUTS OUT 5 MIXING STEPS

● Presto is something special in cake flour—it's self-rising cake flour. The baking powder and salt are already in it.

Use Presto in any of your favorite cake-flour recipes and cut out the steps of adding baking powder, adding salt, sifting three times. These ingredients are evenly blended in Presto by a process that whirls them together 100 times a minute.

Come in on this success-making, work-saving beam. Try . . .

PRESTO MYSTERY MUFFINS

2 cups Presto Self-Rising Cake Flour
½ cup grated raw carrots
2 eggs or 4 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar or honey
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
¾ cup milk
4 tablespoons melted Nucoa or shortening

(1) Sift, measure Presto. (2) Prepare carrots. (3) Reserve 2 teaspoons egg and beat rest light with sugar or honey and orange rind. (4) Combine with carrot and add to Presto with milk and melted Nucoa or shortening. (5) Stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. (6) Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full. (7) Brush tops with reserved egg and sprinkle with a tablespoon of sugar or brush with honey mixed with a little orange rind. (8) Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Yield: 12 2½-inch muffins.

SELF RISING CAKE FLOUR

Fleet Lightness Mars Recital by Pianist Waller

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

Lillian Magnuson Waller was heard by a slender audience in a piano recital in Kimball hall last night, sponsored by Zeta chapter of Phi Beta fraternity for the benefit of the annual scholarship.

Miss Waller is the owner but not always the mistress of a set of fleet fingers, so fleet in fact that they incline to glibness. They stir the piano to a tone of tinkling pleasantness, which is well enough in such pieces as two Scarlatti sonatas and an Arietta by Leonardo Leo, but which is diet of starvation order when the music calls for a tone of warmth and roundness, or when solid power is an essential, as in Brahms' Intermezzo in A major, and the early Scherzo in E flat minor.

Miss Waller centered her main efforts upon Chopin's Sonata in B minor, not too happy a choice for the pianist's particular capabilities. The architecture of this work is not its strongest feature, nor is a sense of continuity and proportion outstanding in Miss Waller's musical equipment, so that an otherwise eloquent composition sounded more than ever fragmentary and episodic. The lyrical interludes often enjoyed tender treatment, but there was little of passionate drama in this interpretation, and the bravoura of the finale skidded dangerously around some sharp corners. It would also be advisable for the pianist to check with her printed text on the rhythmical values of the first theme of the slow movement.

A brace of modern pieces found Miss Waller at her best in the fleet lightness demanded by Gustav Holst's Toccata and Pick-Mangiagalli's "Dance of Olaf." A melodious "Legend" by the Chicagoan, Rossetter Cole, proved attractive, with a gently adventurous touch at the close, and an interesting "Autumn Elegy" by Wladigeroff brought the recitalist closest to contemporary ideals of nuance and tone color in piano playing.

BIG TEN RULING ON ELIGIBILITY MAY BAR MIKAN

Other Basketball Stars in Jeopardy

BY WILFRID SMITH

Eligibility restrictions, reënacted last week by the faculty committee of the Western conference, may also bar several stars from schools outside the conference from the current basketball campaign. George Mikan, De Paul university center, who averaged more than 21 points a game last year, heads the list. Ned Postels, regular guard on Iowa's Western conference championship quintet, also may be affected.

Bill Chandler Jr., Marquette university guard, who is starting his sixth year of varsity basketball competition, is another midwestern athlete who likely will be barred by the ruling. Chandler completed three years and then continued at Marquette as a navy V-12 medical student.

Lawrence [Pops] Harrison, Iowa basketball coach, said yesterday that as far as he knew none of his squad would be lost by the recent rulings of the faculty committee. The Rev. Joseph Phoenix, chairman of the athletic committee of De Paul university, said that when copies of the Big Ten rulings are available, his committee will study them and, if there seems to be any question of Mikan's eligibility, De Paul will ask K. L. Wilson, Western conference commissioner, for a ruling.

Ned Postels George Mikan

"De Paul maintains the same standard of eligibility as the Western conference," Father Phoenix said, "and will continue to do so."

Follow Big 10 Code

De Paul meets Illinois and Minnesota in basketball this winter. The Demons' athletic relationships with many of the Big Ten universities in recent years have been built on the basis of identical eligibility regulations. Marquette, Notre Dame, and Michigan State are other midwestern universities which also follow the Western conference eligibility code.

The question of Mikan's eligibility hinges on the three years varsity competition permitted civilians. Mikan now is starting his fourth year of varsity competition at De Paul. Last week the conference faculty men granted four years competition for those men who began playing as freshmen during the period of Big Ten emergency legislation. Mikan apparently does not come under this ruling.

Fourth Year for Ponsetto

The conflict in interpretation stems from the faculty permission to service men to play a fourth year when they spent one of their three years in service at a conference university. Thus Joe Ponsetto, Michigan quarter back, who has played three years as a navy student, will have a fourth year. Ponsetto did not play as a freshman.

Postels' eligibility at Iowa involves the season he represented South Dakota State before matriculating at Iowa. This is Postels' third season as a civilian on the Iowa basketball team.

HUBBARD BEATS HUBERT HOOD IN MARIGOLD BOUT

John Hubbard, lanky, fast stepping Milwaukee heavyweight, decisively defeated Hubert Hood, 1942 Chicagoland Golden Gloves heavyweight champion in an eight round bout before 1,391 fans in Marigold Gardens last night.

Hood floored Hubbard, also a Golden Gloves product, for a nine count shortly after the first round opened, but before the period ended the Milwaukeean sent Hubert to the canvas for a three count.

Benny Droll, Peoria middleweight and Luther Brent fought to a draw in a six round semi-windup. In other bouts Marty Collura of Milwaukee beat Al Jackson in five rounds; Ramey McKnight of Milwaukee knocked out Paul Nelson in the first round, and Ray Birkett of Peoria knocked out Chico Romez in the first.

Fight Decisions

At Marigold Gardens—John Hubbard beat Hubert Hood [8]; Bernie Droll and Luther Brent drew [6]; Marty Collura beat Al Jackson [5]; Ramey McKnight knocked out Paul Nelson [1]; Ray Birkett knocked out Chico Romez [1].

At New York—Cecil Hudson beat Fritzie Zivic [10]; Vinnie Rossano beat Tony Riccio [8]; Joe Carbido knocked out Ray Parker [1]; John Thomas beat Billy Grant [8]; Rocco Rossano beat Joe Rogers [4].

At Milwaukee, Wis.—Dave Castilloux beat Juzio Fontaine [10]; Johnny Sandro knocked out Jean Barriere [2]; Alvan Jordan beat Henry Majcher [6]; Charley Pepe knocked out Johnny Pryor [2]; Jesse Yarber knocked out Carmen Greco [3].

At Baltimore, Md.—Joe Walcott knocked out Curtis Shepherd [10]; Joe O'Connell beat Booker Robinson [6].

DISCUSS THIRD MAJOR LEAGUE

One of the important items before the annual meeting of the officials of the National and American leagues is the Pacific Coast league's bid for recognition as a third major league. Clarence (Pants) Rowland (center), president of the coast organization, talks it over with William Harridge (left), president of the American league, and Ford Frick, head of the National league. The meeting opened yesterday in the Palmer House. [TRIBUNE Photos]

WILDCATS ROUT DEPAUW, 67-36, IN FIRST START

Northwestern's basketball team ran up 11 consecutive points to open its season last night against DePauw university in the Evanston High school gymnasium. With this leverage, the Wildcats proceeded to double the score at the intermission, 34 to 17, and then marked up a final tabulation of 67 to 36.

DePauw lacked height and speed to cope with Northwestern, altho the Wildcats themselves may discover these same handicaps against more experienced midwestern quintets. Max Morris, Northwestern's sole regular from last season, when he led the Big Ten conference in scoring, got five field goals. He hit penalty shots after missing his first two. There is no question mark on Morris' work, altho he abandoned the gridiron only recently.

King Gets 21 Points

Le Roy King, Northwestern's 6 foot 7 inch center, playing his first conference season after some experience at Monmouth college, was the big attraction. King tipped in or shot from pivot plays near the backboard and amassed eight field goals in 35 minutes. He also scored five free throws in eight attempts.

King paired acceptably with Morris in this game and his determined performance promises steady improvement. Phil Lofgren, who apparently will be the other forward, scored four times in the first half.

Wheeler Lends a Hand

Buzz Wheeler, recent Navy transfer, from Gustavus Adolphus, surprised with five field goals, all of them set shots from the side. Wheeler and Bud Carter, the other guard, scarcely measure up, however, to the caliber of Northwestern's defensive pair of last season. Most of the Wildcat substitutes entered the game in the final five minutes.

Dick Coffey, DePauw starting guard, and Norman Knights, best ball handler for the Tigers, lacked sufficient assistance to make the game a contest. Early in the second period the Tigers trailed, 42 to 24, but Northwestern put together 12 consecutive points and finished handily. Lineup:

LOYOLA PREPS TO BE COACHED BY LT. CUMMINS

Lt. Robert Cummins has been named basketball and football coach at Loyola academy to succeed Hicks Connelly, who resigned recently, the Rev. Ira Walker, S. J., principal, announced yesterday. Cummins expects to be discharged from the navy around Jan. 1, at which time he will take over his coaching duties. He is a graduate of Fenwick High school, Oak Park, and was a star football player at Xavier university, Cincinnati, in 1937. Before entering the service he coached at Marquette University High school in 1942 and 1943.

Bears' McAfee to Gallop in Topeka Outfield Next Year

BY EDWARD PRELL

The Western association, a class C league with clubs in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Texas, will have a terrific drawing card next season. George McAfee, Chicago Bears' half back and rated the greatest runner in football, will get a tryout with Topeka, Kas.

McAfee played outfield at Duke university and later in the navy. He is a left handed hitter. The announcement was made by Fido Murphy, owner of the Topeka franchise. Fido, one time New England high school star and later an itinerant college player, says he has signed 25 players, all of whom he personally scouted while in the navy.

George Halas, owner of the Bears, has given McAfee permission to go into professional baseball.

Gordon Maltzberger, the pre-war star relief pitcher of the White Sox, has advised Manager Jimmy Dykes that he will not be available for the 1946 season. Maltzberger, an army private, is stationed in the Philippines.

When told that Outfielder Jeff Heath of the Cleveland Indians was among the baseball folk at the major league meetings in the Palmer House, Dykes cracked: "What's he here for—to meet his new bosses? Now don't ask me who they are." The Sox have been after Heath for several seasons.

The Washington Senators also were said to have entered the Heath derby to such an extent they would give up George Case, their speedy outfielder.

Charlie Grimm, the Cubs' manager, had little time yesterday for baseball meeting chores. He was recovering from the party he tossed rival managers, a tradition for the winning pilot each year. Charlie and Traveling Secretary Bob Lewis still were working on the Golden Ox restaurant tab and promised a financial bulletin before the meeting ends.

Merv Shea, the old White Sox catcher, who will be the Cubs' chief west coast scout, will head a staff of 10 or 12 week-end ivory hunters on the west coast. Merv's headquarters will be in Wrigley field, Los Angeles, and he may have to sleep there, too, as Mrs. Shea has been blanked for several weeks in an apartment search. Shea was a Phillie coach in 1944-'45.

Gen. Jacob Devers, army ground forces commander, will appear before tomorrow's joint session to pay tribute to baseball, on behalf of the army, for its morale contribution during the war. He will be accompanied by Brig. Gen. E. G. Sebree of the ground forces special information service.

One of many rumors was that the Cooper brothers will have a reunion in Boston next season. Morton, the pitcher, went to the Braves early last season. Walker, the catcher, will wind up with the Braves, according to the grapevine.

Christmas shopping short story: Charlie Grimm entered a loop store and a few minutes later exited one block westward. "That crowd didn't even give me a chance to make a left or a right turn," the Cub manager complained.

Olympic and AAU Groups Reach Accord

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—The United States of America sports federation changed its name to the United States Olympic association today and elected an almost entirely new slate of officers as the National Collegiate Athletic association and the National A. A. U. came to terms. Avery Brundage of Chicago was re-elected president of the Olympic group for his fifth four year term, only one of the old officers to survive.

Kenneth L. Wilson of Chicago, Big Ten commissioner, was elected vice president; Owen Van Camp, Chicago bank official, was named treasurer, and Asa S. Bushnell of New York, secretary of the Eastern intercollegiate offices, is the new secretary.

Brundage, after the meeting, said that for "25 years the N. C. A. A. and the A. A. U. have been striving for the same goal but along different paths. As of today, we are using the same road.

The National Federation of State High School Athletic associations is a third member of the new accord and both the N. C. A. A. and the prep group now are A. A. U. affiliates.

The delegates listened to T. L. Yuan of Peiping, who told of the rebirth of athletic interest in China and asked the support of the United States in bringing the Olympics to China in 1952.

SOLEM RESIGNS AS SYRACUSE U. FOOTBALL COACH

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 10 (AP)—Syracuse university's athletic director, Lewis Andreas, announced tonight that Ossie Solem has resigned as head football coach. Andreas said he received a letter from Solem early tonight containing the resignation which he declared he would accept.

Solem's replacement has been rumored since the close of the 1945 football season in which the team won one game and lost six. Andreas said that no successor has been chosen.

LISTEN WELL TO PLEAS FOR THIRD LEAGUE

Separate Sessions on Today's Slate

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

The Pacific Coast league gave out with oratory yesterday in behalf of its aim to be recognized as a major league outfit, but the official answer will not be provided until tomorrow by the present big time organizations—the National and American leagues.

All that appeared evident in the case after the Coast leaguers had talked with the American and then with the National during the annual business sessions in the Palmer House, was that the proposal of Clarence Rowland, Coast league president, and his pals had been received courteously but not with open arms.

From the majors' standpoint it was one of those touchy "O, this is so sudden things," and the listeners also had to keep in mind that they were hearing the talk of big money, not pocket change.

Federal League Recalled

There seems to be some idea the Coast league fellows merely are trying to have a little fun and at the same time advertise their part of the world, but so far as can be detected by the men involved the entire proposal is on the square and this is the way the majors aim to treat it, some of them being old enough to recall that the last time there were big league ambitions loose in the land, they proved costly. That was the Federal league with which the majors finally had to settle. Another such experience isn't sought altho the Coast leaguers insist they will progress peaceably or not at all.

The Coast league plea was delivered by Charley Graham of the San Francisco club, ably assisted by its owner Paul Fagan. Others on the committee were Victor Collins, C. L. Laws, and Rowland. Nobody mentioned that one Coast league owner is the proprietor of 12 breweries but the major magnates had heard about this previously.

Line Up with Chandler

The two majors, except for short recesses, didn't break up for the day until dinner was overdue and other things among the announcements made at the time included the fact they still are trying to discourage the gentlemen who seem to think there is an open season on Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

The majors decided the expired major-minor agreement will be extended for another year. That's the fourth or fifth time, but the majors added this time that the extension will conform to the amendments they already have decided upon.

This means Chandler will have full power, as did Landis, to act on conduct considered detrimental to baseball and that if there is some legislation he doesn't favor it must be put to another vote instead of in the pigeon hole. From this you can gather that the minors will continue to keep themselves under the commissioner's protection—but the big leagues pay the $50,000 per.

Agree in Higher League Ratings

Among other things, the major leaguers agreed to a triple A instead of a double A rating for the American association, the International, and the Pacific Coast leagues and a double A rating for the Southern association and Texas league. They also decided to withhold final judgment until tomorrow on the extent of night baseball, altho it was admitted the two St. Louis clubs and the Washington Senators don't want to be restricted.

The American league named the Chicago, Cleveland, Boston, and New York clubs as entitled to membership on the 1946 board of directors. This means Leslie O'Connor, who will become the Chicago club's general manager and vice president next Saturday, will be on the board and the junior major elected Connie Mack as vice president.

COAST ATHLETIC CHIEFS MEET; ELECT STINER

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 10 (AP)—Representatives of the Pacific Coast Athletic conference opened their annual winter meeting today with the task of readjusting the conference to post-war conditions uppermost on the agenda.

Lon Stiner, Oregon State college coach, was elected president of the Coast Conference Coaches' association, succeeding Jeff Cravath of the University of Southern California.

NOTES on the Illinois basketball squad: Hal Craig, freshman forward, scored 1,200 points in 110 games during his four seasons at Decatur High school. . . . Bob Doster says his biggest athletic thrill was helping Decatur win the state prep crown last spring. Paul Eckert admits the most memorable event in his career to date was scoring 27 points against Collinsville in the last Mount Vernon Christmas tournament. . . . Eckert, playing with Herrin, was named to the all-tournament team. . . . Bill Edwards stars on the diamond as well as the court. . . . His 1944 Staunton High school nine went to the Illinois finals. . . . He plans to try for Wallie Roettger's varsity team in the spring. . . . Cal Irvin holds the individual scoring record at Orange, N. J., High school with 28 points in a single game. . . . Bob Kersey was a member of the Illinois golf squad last spring and expects to keep his berth in 1946. . . . Ballots of the Illinois players rate Andy Phillip, a former Illini flash, and Hank Luisetti, who starred for Stanford university, about equal as their basketball ideal. . . . Myron Lakin, V-12 senior from Springfield, says he enjoyed his top thrill in 1943 when Coach Mark Peterman drafted him from the high school band to play against Taylorville in the sectional tournament. . . . Lakin scored 10 points but his team lost. . . . Long John Lawther of Penn State, the east's No. 1 exponent of the sliding zone defense in basketball, came to the Nittany Lions from Westminster in 1936. . . . In nine seasons his quintets have won 117 games while losing 56. . . . At Westminster he saw his proteges carry off 166 triumphs in 201 starts.

Glenn Johnson, who returned from two years of service in the army air forces to win the starting quarter back role on the 1945 Michigan State football team, has been named student member of the school's athletic council. . . . His home is in Grosse Ile, Mich. . . . Jimmy Joyce, who is considered little more than a preliminary fighter in Chicago, will be paid around $4,000 for his 10 round main event with Jackie Graves in Minneapolis Thursday night. . . . Graves can pack them in against anybody in his home town. . . . Lew Jenkins, former lightweight champion, who was stopped by Jimmy Doyle recently, is the ring's top playboy, according to Artie Rose, his former trainer. . . . In his heyday, Jenkins outdid such famous night lifers as Max Baer, Harry Greb, and Chuck Wiggins, says Rose. . . . Louis Menze, coach of Iowa State's Big Six conference basketball champions, says he has only three certain starters. . . . The other two positions are up for grabs. . . . The trio already nominated for first line duty includes Ron Norman and Bob Peterson, guards, and Jim Stark, forward. . . . Polo teams from Guatemala, Mexico, and Peru will compete in an international series in Mexico City next month. . . . Adm. Halsey calls himself "the worst full back in Annapolis' history." . . . Scorekeepers at Marquette basketball games have to be alert, what with Guards Bob Meyers and Don Myers, Center Ken Wiesner and Guard Hank Weisner on the roster.

Final Assignment

A faded service flag at last reclines
Within a treasured box of souvenirs,
Today we took it down from where it hung
While he was gone to war almost three years.
The star of blue becomes a memory,
A memory of tears . . . of joy and pride;
A chapter that is new commences now . . .
The family once more standing side by side.

Double or Nothing

The twins had a birthday not long ago,
And of course they rated a party, Sherry and Steve and Michael and Jim,
And a couple of tykes named McCarty;
So there had to be two of everything,
[I'm assuming you know how twins are],
Everything double feature,
If you'd sidestep a family war.

Each of the children brought two little gifts,
One Sara's, the other Suzanne's,
A pair of this and a pair of that,
Tied up with ribbons and strands;
So I jokingly said to their mother,
"Twins are double the trouble of one,"
She just looked at me and grinned impishly,
"But remember, they're twice as much fun!"

The Fireplace

When summer days have gone and wintry chill
Invades the evening twilight there is still
A compensating gladness we may know
Within the circle of the hearthside glow.
With familiar charm the fireplace plays host
To cherished friends and those we love the most.
Its crackling fuel unstinted cheer extends
That gently thaws our natures thru. and lends
To low spun words its punctuation clear
In notes staccato for each listening ear.
The little tongues of flame in sportive play
Vie at tossing sparks aloft in play.
Then comes the time when embers burning low,
Bright essence of all happiness we know,
Revive dear memories of days now gone
And rouse the dreams of joys about to dawn. —B. L. Bruce

SENT BY REDS TO PHILS FOR CASH, PLAYERS

Hollywood Obtains Woody Williams

BY EDWARD BURNS

First Baseman Frank McCormick, holder of many National league records and the league's most valuable player in 1940, yesterday was sold by the Cincinnati Reds to the Philadelphia Phillies for cash and players to be announced later. News of the transaction, rumored at the minor league convention in Columbus, O., last week, was confirmed late yesterday at the major league convention in the Palmer House.

Frank McCormick

McCormick has spent eight full seasons with the Reds and started his career as the Cincinnati regular first baseman in 1938 by making 209 hits. He had a lifetime batting average with the Reds of .304 going into last season, in which he fell below his all time mark wth .276. Last season he batted in 81 runs and played in 152 games. He knocked 10 home runs.

Nearing 33d Birthday

McCormick, who will be 33 years old next month, in 1939 set a National league record for double plays by a first baseman, with 153 in 156 games, and led the league that year in runs batted in with 130.

McCormick holds the record for first baseman leading the league in fielding, with five seasons at the top, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, and 1944. He also set a record for fewest strikeouts by a player in 150 games or more in 1938-'39-'41-'42.

The amount of cash involved was not revealed but rumored to be in excess of $20,000.

Woody Williams Sold

The passing yesterday of McCormick and Woody Williams, second baseman, who was sent to Hollywood in the Pacific Coast league, left only Shortstop Eddie Miller of the Reds' 1945 infield. Third Baseman Steve Mesner having been sold to Sacramento some days ago.

The Chicago clubs were doing their share of confabbing, tho the best player announcement did not involve transfer of a player—but the return of one of Chicago's all time favorites—Ted Lyons. Manager Jim Dykes of the White Sox received word from the ex-captain, just out of the marines, that he will reach here today, prepared to convince his skipper that his 45 years don't mean a thing. Ted expects to be Dykes' Sunday pitcher as of old. The outcome of today's reunion, however, will be that Lyons will be appointed a Sox coach, succeeding Muddy Ruel. This would not interfere with Ted's expressed desire to take a weekly turn on the mound.

Mention Dixie Walker

Several clubs indicated they had completed deals and that announcements were being held in abeyance, pending the polishing off of certain details. This led to speculation in the convention halls and one of the most frequently bandied names was that of Dixie Walker, pet of the Brooklyn fans for many seasons, but said to have lost favor with the gents responsible for paying the star outfielder and National league batting champion in 1944. The one-time White Sox player was reported on his way to the Boston Braves.

Jeff Heath, the temperamental Cleveland outfielder and slugger and the fellow about whom the rumor-smiths write each year at winter baseball meetings when they find themselves bereft of items, arrived here yesterday to listen to rumors about himself without having to wait to see conjectures in print. At the moment nothings seems certain, except that Manager Lou Boudreau

TILDEN SENIOR QUINTET WINS 4TH IN ROW, 37-34

Tuley, Englewood Also Register Victories

Ed Maracich, guard, paced Tilden Tech's senior quintet to its fourth consecutive practice victory yesterday, defeating Marshall, 37 to 34, in the Tilden gym. Maracich scored six baskets and one free throw.

Another guard, George Ciszewski of Tuley, registered nine field goals and three free throws to lead Tuley's seniors to a 49 to 38 triumph over Dunbar in the former's gym.

Englewood split a double header with Phillips, the seniors winning, 36 to 25, and the juniors losing, 40 to 16. In the senior contest, Doyle Haynes, Englewood center, headed for his own basket in the third period to score two points for Phillips.

McCormick Is Sold to Phils by Cincinnati

is not secretive about his determination to peddle Jeff to the best bidder.

At the same time the Hollywood club made the announcement it had been able to get Williams out of the National league, the club also announced it had acquired the contract of Stan Andrews, a catcher last year with the Dodgers and the Phillies, and Pitcher Jim Estock, a Philly chattel, who won 22 games for Wilmington last season.

Williams Deal a Surprise

Surprise over the passing of Williams from the major league scene grows out of the fact he played 155 games for the Reds in 1944 and led the league in fielding. He also is co-holder of the National league record for consecutive hits. He rounded out a string of 10 safe ones in a row in Wrigley field in 1943. Williams played in 133 games last year.

George Woodend, who was with the Cubs in spring training last year and briefly with the club, yesterday was transferred from the Cub reserve list to the Angels.

IMPLY ARNOLD SWAYS U. S. ON PULLMAN SALE

Rails, Steel Spring Assail Attitude

BY CHARLES GOTTHART

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 10—The department of justice and Thurman Arnold, erstwhile New Deal "trust buster," were under attack today as hearings were resumed on disposition of the Pullman sleeping car business. Lawyers representing all four groups of bidders for the 75 million dollar property were heard by a special United States court consisting of Judges Albert B. Maris, John Biggs Jr., and Herbert F. Goodrich.

Justice department critics assailed its current stand against the bid of a group of railroads that use nearly all the country's sleeping cars, contending this was a reversal of its position earlier in the extensive litigation. They inferred the new policy was influenced by Arnold, who began the government's monopoly case against Pullman while he was in the department, but who now is the attorney for one of the prospective buyers, the Otis & Co. group.

Former Association Recalled

Jacob Aronson, representing the railroads, recalled that Holmes Baldridge, justice department representative now opposing the railroads, was Arnold's assistant when the government began the litigation. He denied charges that sale to the roads would set up a new monopoly.

Until last March it was understood by all then interested in the case that the carriers had the unquestioned right to buy the property, said Aronson. Since then the carriers have formally accepted Pullman's offer of sale to carry out the court decree to divorce the sleeping car business from the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company, other principal subsidiary of Pullman, Inc.

Aronson attacked as visionary the plan of Arnold's clients—a rail and investment banking group including Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany corporation, and Otis. He denied charges that his rail group intended "now or ever" to dissolve the sleeping car pool that again proved its worth in the movement of troops.

Federal Intercession Hinted

Arnold, who has threatened to carry the case to the United States Supreme court if his clients do not get the property, asserted that if private interests did not carry out the rail expansion he said was necessary to meet airplane competition, the government "will do the job." He termed the rail plan "a cartel idea."

Altho Arnold and others had protested assumed influence of the big railroads on the future Pullman operations, he asked that Young be permitted to retain his rail directorships if the group obtains the property. He reiterated his clients' intentions to spend 500 million dollars on new sleeping cars and scrap most of the present 7,000 car fleet as obsolete.

Baldridge entered government opposition to all four proposals, but found "certain advantages" to the Young-Otis plan.

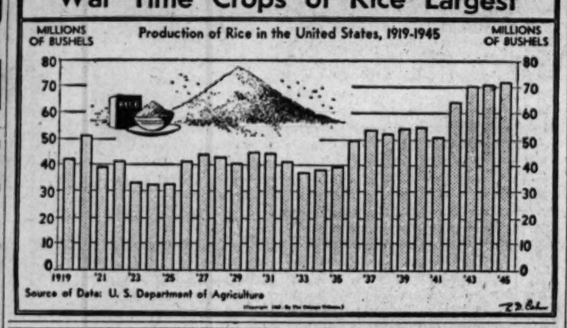
"Only One That Meets Terms"

Leo F. Tierney, appearing for an investment banking group headed by Glore, Forgan & Co. of Chicago, asserted its proposal was the only one that fully met terms of the court decree. He emphasized his group did not wish the Pullman property unless it can obtain satisfactory contracts with the roads—a strong point for the rail group.

The justice department and the Arnold interests were accused of joining in a "wholly unjustified" attack on another bidder by Lewis M. Stevens, representing the Standard Steel Spring company. Stevens denied his group was influenced by Mellon banking interests.

Pullman "would soon go bankrupt" if the Young interests were allowed to follow out their "uneconomic" plan, said Stevens. He asserted his group was discussing mutually satisfactory operating contracts with a number of roads, and made a point of the former association of Arnold and Baldridge.

War Time Crops of Rice Largest



U.S., Canada, Britain Retain Food Controls

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—The United States, Great Britain, and Canada today agreed to continue their combined food board to retain control over allocations of scarce foodstuffs.

At the same time the three governments announced the combined production and resources board and the combined raw materials board will go out of business Dec. 31.

In a statement by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee of Britain, and Prime Minister King of Canada, it also was agreed:

That the committees under the outgoing boards which are concerned with cotton textiles, tin, rubber, hides, and leather will be continued as long as a shortage of supply remains, and that the coal committees in Washington and London now under the boards continue in their present form, altho there exists an European organization for coal.

Expected to End by June 30

The three leaders said they anticipated dissolution of the combined food board itself on June 30, 1946, "or sooner if conditions permit."

"However," the joint statement said, "a few of the commodity committees may have to be retained beyond that date to recommend allocations of products which continue to be in serious short supply. Arrangements were made last summer to associate other major exporting and importing countries with the work of the commodity committees. These committees will continue to operate on this principle."

The statement paid tribute to the achievement of the boards in the "equitable utilization of resources" for the war.

Shortages Prompt Move

Continued shortages of sugar, fats and oils, and meats were believed to have prompted the three powers to retain the food board.

The board has recommendatory powers on the division of foods among themselves and other nations to assure minimum needs.

Thus, in the case of sugar, all world supplies available to the three nations are pooled and apportioned among themselves, liberated nations, and neutral countries.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS TO BUY SIX PUMPS ON GRAND COULEE SCALE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—The department of the interior went shopping today for water pumps so big that one of them could pump a gallon of water in three hours for every man, woman, and child in this country.

Eventually 12 of the big pumps will be installed at Grand Coulee dam to provide irrigation for more than 3 million acres of farms in the Columbia basin, but bids were asked today for only four or six units. Driven by 65,000 horse power electric motors, each pump must be capable of lifting 12,000 gallons of water a second to a height of 270 feet.

Because water pumps approaching the size of the Grand Coulee dam equipment never have been built, the successful bidder will be required to build a scale model for extensive tests to prove its efficiency. Delivery of the first pump is scheduled for November, 1948, with three more to be delivered in 1949.

LABOR SHORTAGE KEEPS CURBS ON BUILDING WAGES

The possibility of rocketing wages in the building and construction industry thru drastic bidding for scarce labor was the reason the war labor board recently refused to permit voluntary increases in wages by builders, Edward Vallon, regional wage stabilization director, said yesterday.

"There is a severe man power shortage in the building industry despite the large number of unemployed in other activities," Vallon said. "If builders were allowed to raise wages as they saw fit there would be so much bidding for much needed workers that wages would soar to unprecedented heights."

The building industry must continue to submit proposed wage changes to the wage adjustment board for an indefinite period to prevent a "chaotic wage situation" which might hamper reconversion, he said. Other businesses may increase wages after Dec. 21.

HOUSE APPROVES BILL TO EXEMPT RATE COMPACTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10—(AP)—Legislation permitting railroads and other surface carriers to enter rate and service agreements with immunity from anti-trust laws was passed 277 to 45 by the house today and sent to the senate.

The bill conditions freedom from anti-trust action on approval of the rate and service agreements by the interstate commerce commission as working in the public interest.

Opponents of the bill, offered by Rep. Bulwinkle [D., N. C.], attacked it as a step toward destruction of anti-trust laws. Rep. Tarver [D., Ga.] said it would "cut the ground from under" efforts of the south and west to get relief from "rate discrimination." He contended the legislation would absolve railroads now involved in anti-trust suits in Georgia and at Lincoln, Neb.

HUB NET INCOME CLIMBS 74 PCT. ABOVE YEAR AGO

Net earnings of the Hub, Henry C. Lytton & Co., rose about 74 per cent above year ago profits in the three months ended Oct. 31, third quarter of its fiscal year, the company said yesterday. Directors voted to call all 5 per cent cumulative income debentures, amounting to $565,008, which on retirement would eliminate all funded indebtedness.

Third quarter net income was $133,652, or 45 cents a share, against $76,904, or 26 cents a share. Profit in the nine months ended Oct. 31, including earnings of the Young-Quinlan company since acquisition last May, was $202,983, or 68 cents a share, compared with $124,559, or 41 cents a share.

Third quarter sales rose about 42 per cent to $6,009,020 and nine months' volume increased 32 per cent to $13,000,010, including Young-Quinlan volume.

Holeproof Ships 250,000 Pairs of Nylon Hosiery

Holeproof Hosiery company of Milwaukee has shipped 250,000 pairs of nylon women's hose to 3,500 dealers in more than 1,000 cities thruout the country and plans to ship 7,000 dozen pairs of men's nylon hose to the same dealers next week, Gustave Frankel, president, said yesterday. Approximately 25,000 pairs of the women's hose and some of the men's hose are scheduled for Chicago area dealers.

Warn 'Lambs' Stock Prices, Values Differ

BY EDWIN NICHOLS

Indiscriminate buying of the lowest priced stocks is becoming a subject of increasing concern in investment circles. Many previously quoted below $10 a share have doubled and trebled in market price this year, a fact which brokers said yesterday was appealing strongly to the gambling spirit of "the public," a broad term which includes nonprofessional speculators, once known in street parlance as "lambs."

Of the 20 most active issues on the New York Stock exchange last week, 12 were quoted below $12 a share. Packard Motor, the leader in turnover, at 11¾ compared with a 1945 low of 5¼. Low priced stocks of utility holding companies have been especially in demand. A striking example is the rise of Standard Gas and Electric $4 preferred, which this year has climbed from 2¾ to 33⅜.

Here's Formula—Even Tho Silly

A prominent brokerage firm, which has been consistently bullish on the general market, made the following comment:

"During these days of hectic buying of lowest priced issues our telephones ring dozens of times a day with requests from our more venturesome customers for our recommendations in this regard. Let us be very frank and state that if venturesome customers with a gambling instinct want a formula we might offer, it is this:

"Close your eyes and stick a pin in the New York Stock exchange quotations of your daily newspaper until you strike a very low priced issue. Then toss a coin for heads you buy and tails you don't.

"If the silliness of this formula brings home the seriousness of the risks involved in the current buying of inferior grade securities it will have served its purpose."

Price-to-Profit Ratios High

Another house called attention in its daily market letter to the high ratios of prices to earnings which certain low quoted stocks have reached. Packard, it noted, is quoted at 42 times the 1944 profit of 27 cents a share; Radio corporation at 37 times earnings of 51 cents; Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western at 287 times earnings of 5 cents. General Realty and United corporation, neither of which had 1944 earnings on common stocks, were quoted recently at 8¾ and 4¾, the letter observed.

Earlier this year, the Packard Motor Car company with 15 million shares outstanding was "worth $78,750,000," it continued. "However, with the stock at 11¾ the company is now worth $176,250,000 to the trading public and this in less than a year's time."

The so-called "penny" stocks are having a heyday. Stories of the man who bought at 25 cents a share and sold at $1 to quadruple his capital have whipped up speculative interest. One day last week the Salt Lake City stock market boasted "a million share day." Of a representative list of 33 mining stocks traded, however, only five were quoted as high as $1.

Fever Spreads to London

American demand for low priced issues has spread to London. A Reuters dispatch from there a few days ago said: "Continued big American buying of low priced British securities prompted a continuance of opinion among financial observers here that United States buyers may get their fingers burned. On Dec. 3, New York brokers bought well in excess of 100,000 Gaumont A ordinary film shares at up to 18 shillings [$3.60] compared with only 13 shillings a week ago."

OPA Reinstates Ceilings on Imported Liqueurs

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—Price ceilings on imported whisky flavored cordials, liqueurs, and specialty beverages were reinstated today by the OPA at the same levels as when ceilings were suspended Aug. 15.

DECIDES UNION MUST PASS ON PLAN FOR RAISE

Store's Action Held Harmful by Court

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—The United States Supreme court ruled, 5 to 3, today that it was unfair labor practice for an employer to ask authority to raise wages of employes without dealing thru their certified union which he did not recognize.

The decision was against Famous-Barr company, a St. Louis department store with 4,500 employes. It applied to the war labor board to raise nearly all its workers $2 a week. This included 40 bushelmen, members of a CIO union. Bushelmen are workers engaged in alteration of men's clothing.

The court said unanimously that the company should have recognized the union as bargaining agent. But there agreement ended. The majority ran into stiff argument in holding that the wage application without negotiating with the union was unfair labor practice under the Wagner act.

Termed Curb on Union's Rights

The majority opinion by Justice Reed held that the company's action "interferes with the right of self-organization by emphasizing to the employes that there is no necessity for the collective bargaining agent." He was joined by Justices Burton, Black, Douglas, and Murphy.

Justice Rutledge, dissenting, said the wage action amounted to nothing more "than the exercise of legal rights secured to the employer by the Wagner act, the stabilization act, and the first amendment." His position was supported by Chief Justice Stone and Justice Frankfurter.

The company's action "minimizes the influence of collective bargaining," said the majority opinion.

"If successful in securing approval for the proposed increase it might well block the bargaining representative in securing further wage adjustments," it said.

The majority recalled the national labor relations board's conclusion "that the manner of presenting and publicizing the application had the effect of coercing the employes."

Says Credit Not Required

The Rutledge minority opinion asserted that the Wagner act does not require "an employer to maintain a union's prestige or to give it credit for originating all proposals which may have some future effect upon his relations with his employes."

"[The law] forbids interference, coercion, and restraint upon employes in the exercise of their rights, not the mere failure of the employer to magnify the union's influence."

The court directed modification of the board's order against the company, but the effect of it was not clear to the minority, whose opinion said, "It is difficult to understand."

Ads Play Larger Role Than Stimulus for Sales, Says Cone

The value of advertising beyond its immediate stimulus to sales was demonstrated under war conditions when goods were scarce, members of the advertising department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE were told yesterday by Fairfax Cone, chairman of the executive committee of Foote, Cone & Belding.

Fairfax Cone

"Advertising grew up with the realization that it can do more than sell goods," said Cone, whose firm handles some of the country's largest advertising accounts.

Tells of Institutional Ads

Cone described some of the outstanding "institutional advertising" campaigns of the war years. A company whose business it is to sell canned vegetables told housewives thru advertising how to grow and can vegetables at home. Meat packing companies bought space to explain to women how to get the most out of a pound of meat. A large manufacturer of refrigerators won good will by telling owners of competitive models as well as its own customers how to get the best use from their equipment.

Cone said one of the most successful war time advertising campaigns was put on by a railroad which informed the public of its crucial war activities, solicited public understanding of its problems, and brought home the truth that the railroad was not merely a corporation, but an organization of people doing a highly important job.

Brings Out "Full Power"

"I do not wish to question the definition of advertising as 'salesmanship in print,'" Cone said. "I wish merely to point up the fact that the war has helped us recognize the full power of advertising, not just half of it."

The speaker criticized what he described as "underadvertising." He said some advertisers never attain the full value of advertising because they do not carry it far enough. This has resulted in part from the power of advertising, he said.

"The influence of newspaper advertising is so great that even weak campaigns are successful," he said. "As a result some advertisers never learn what the full potentialities are."

The meeting at which Cone spoke opened the annual advertising convention of THE TRIBUNE attended by representatives from all parts of the country. Sessions will continue today and tomorrow in the W-G-N main theater studio. W. D. Nugent, Chicago district sales promotion manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co., will speak today.

WILSON & CO. CLOSES PREFERRED EXCHANGE OFFER NEXT MONDAY

Wilson & Co. yesterday announced that holders of 274,085 outstanding shares of $6 preferred stock have the right to exchange up to 250,000 shares for new $4.25 preferred and 50,000 for common stock until the close of business Monday.

The $6 preferred will be exchanged for the $4.25 issue on a share-for-share basis plus 85 cents for accrued dividends on the $6 stock, and for common at the rate of 5½ shares for each of $6 preferred.

The exchange for new preferred is being underwritten by a country-wide banking group headed by Smith, Barney & Co. and Glore, Forgan & Co. Public offering of new preferred not taken is scheduled for Dec. 18 or 19. Shares of $6 preferred not exchanged will be redeemed at $100 a share on Feb. 21.

City National Bank to Vote on Employe Retirement

Stockholders of the City National Bank and Trust company at their annual meeting Jan. 8 will vote on a retirement plan for bank employes. The plan has been adopted by the bank's directors.

TWO BIG ISSUES OF DEBENTURES OFFERED TODAY

Other Large Loans Go on Market

Two public offerings of debentures totaling 125 million dollars will be made today by underwriting groups. One group headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co. will offer 75 million dollars of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company 2¾ per cent debentures at 102.45 and accrued interest. The second group, headed by Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers, will offer 50 millions of National Dairy Products corporation 2¾ per cent debentures at 101¾ plus accrued interest.

The Pacific Telephone debentures are being issued in connection with the retirement of $29,652,000 of series B refunding mortgage bonds and $24,916,000 of series C refunding mortgage bonds.

Will Redeem Debentures

Proceeds of the National Dairy issue's sale will be used to redeem $50,600,000 in 3¼ per cent debentures. After the financing the corporation's capitalization will consist of 50 millions in 2¾ per cent debentures and 6,255,247 shares of common stock.

An underwriting group headed by Kidder, Peabody & Co., and Mer-

How Does This New Auto Law Affect You and Your Employees?

• Automobile owners who become involved in accidents on or after January 1, 1946, are exposed to serious consequences imposed by the new Illinois Motor Vehicle Financial Responsibility Law, effective on that date, unless they provide adequate security or insurance.

Your present insurance coverage, and that of your employees, should be carefully checked to see that you and they are properly protected.

Our Automobile Department will be very happy to give you every possible help.

EXPANSION AHEAD FOR THE BUILDING INDUSTRY

Prospects for the building industry for the next five years are brighter than in all our history. So say the experts.

Annual estimates of new construction running from twelve billion to fifteen billion dollars in the next few years are made by government and private authorities. These estimates embody the residential, commercial, industrial, public works and public utility classifications. Many different divisions of the building industry may be expected to benefit from this anticipated upsurge of activity.

We have prepared a 40-page survey and analysis of thirty-two important companies operating in these divisions. Their stocks have been selected because, in our opinion, they offer opportunities for capital gain over the longer term. This report is available on request.

Is there a time lag in your will?

A review now may be vital!

MUCH heartache, confusion and family misunderstanding have resulted from Wills that were allowed to lag behind current happenings.

Now before the new year begins is a logical time to review the provisions of your Will. Marriages, births or deaths in the family may necessitate alterations in this important document. The war years may have changed the financial needs of your beneficiaries or altered the value of your securities and business interests. Perhaps the executor or trustee may not be in the same position to act as he formerly was.

May we suggest in opening your Will for review that you and your lawyer consider the appointment of The Northern Trust Company as the executor of your Will and the trustee of your estate. We have a booklet, "Practical Suggestions for Making Your Will." A request will bring you a copy.

NEW TYPE PLOW DESCRIBED AS LAND REBUILDER

Helps Prevent Erosion, Says Oliver Head

Details of a new type plow expected eventually to make obsolete conventional type plows were disclosed yesterday by officials of Oliver corporation at a press conference in the Chicago club.

The plow will enable farmers to rejuvenate their lands, protect them against erosion, and increase output with the same or less expenditure of man power, said Alva W. Phelps, president. The implement already has shown in preliminary use on university experimental farms that it will contribute much to soil conservation and improvement, he said.

Adds New Bases

few inches below and behind as well as to one side of the upper bases. The upper bases are adjusted to normal depth for conventional plowing. The lower bases, by widening and deepening the cut, crumble the plowpan (hard soil hitherto left untouched), mixing it slightly with the lower portion of the top soil. The amount of harrowing and discing is reduced, Phelps said.

Helps Prevent Gullying

On slanting fields, where gullying or run-off is a problem, the plow is said to heighten acreage value because deeper tillage catches and absorbs the water which would otherwise wash top soil downhill.

Phelps said the plow will sell for approximately $230. Its price has not yet been approved by the office of price administration. Production will be in the South Bend plant, now idled by a strike, where only tillage tools are made.

People and Events

William C. Hurst, president of the Chicago and Illinois Midland Railway company, a Commonwealth Edison company subsidiary, will retire Jan. 1 at his own request after 55 years in the railroad field, the company announced yesterday. He will be succeeded by Fred L. Schrader, vice president since 1940. Hurst, associated with several midwestern railroads, has been with the C. & I. M. since 1926.

Philip D. Reed, chairman of the General Electric company, will address the annual dinner of the Illinois Manufacturers' association tonight in the Stevens hotel. Reed also is chairman of the American section of the International Chamber of Commerce. Arthur H. Motley, publisher of the American magazine, also will speak.

Henke, Mors & Coven, Inc., advertising agency, has opened offices at 228 N. La Salle st. The firm consists of Herman E. Henke, John A. Mors, and Marion L. Govan.

PRICES OF HOGS CLIMB DESPITE LARGE RECEIPTS

More than 95 per cent of the hog supply sold at ceiling prices in the Chicago stock yards yesterday in brisk competition for packing volume. The average advanced 15 cents to $14.80 per 100 pounds, the practical maximum under the two-price ceiling system. Hogs weighing 190 to 250 pounds were steady to 15 cents higher and others 15 to 50 cents higher. Sows rose 25 to 50 cents. Various classes were 75 cents to $1.50 higher than at the Dec. 1 low when top grades sold at $14 and droves averaged $13.90.

Chicago cattle receipts of 17,000 were above the average of the last five Mondays and 21 per cent heavier than last week, but the 19 outside markets had a 4 per cent decrease in volume.

A rise in Chicago sheep and lamb receipts to the biggest Monday total since May 7 was offset by decreased supplies in other markets. Both cattle and sheep prices were fully steady.

Secretary.

STOCK MARKET INDEX AT PEAK SINCE APRIL, '31

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—The stock market average set another peak for nearly 15 years today. Selected steels and industrial specialties led the advance, altho numerous leaders lost thru profit cashing.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite was up 0.1 at 77.1, a top since April 13, 1931. The industrials advanced 0.2 to 102, highest since April 16, 1930. Utilities added 0.3 at 52.5, highest since Feb. 4, 1937.

Active, Higher at Opening

Forward tendencies prevailed at the start in lively dealings. Upturns of two or more points were reduced or canceled as activity tapered toward the close. Rails and rubbers retreated in the final hour. Some aviations slipped. Transfers of 2,150,000 shares compared with 2,050,000 Friday.

Talk of boosted ceilings aided the metals. Hopes for labor peace by the first of the year, despite the General Motors stalemate, combined with the pressure of idle funds for speculation or investment, again provided bullish inspiration.

RAIL BONDS ADVANCE

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—A relatively large group of railroad bonds advanced today as other principal groups idled in a narrow range with activity in the bond market too light to establish a trend. Sales were $7,300,000, compared with $7,960,000 Friday.

CHICAGO LIST HIGHER

Prices closed higher in turnover of 68,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Of 130 issues traded, 78 advanced and 29 declined. Among active issues, new 1945 peaks were set by Admiral, up 1 at 20, and Oak Manufacturing, up ¼ at 12¼. Asbestos Manufacturing finished ⅜ higher, Chicago corporation rose ⅛, and Central and South West Utilities was unchanged.
